English Reprints

JAMES HOWELL, B.A.

Clerk of the Council

Instructions for Forreine Travell

1642

COLLATED WITH THE SECOND EDITION OF 1650

Senefco non Segnefco

EDITED BY

EDWARD ARBER

F S A ETC LATE EXAMINER IN ENGLISH

LANGUAGE AND TITERATURE

TO THE UNIVERSITY OF

LONDON

WESTMINSTER
A CONSTABLE AND CO., LTD.
1903

CONTENTS

BII	BLIOGRAPHY, .	•	•	•	•	•	2
SH	or f Accounts of	James	Howell,	•	•	•	3
In?	roduction,	•	•	•	•	•	5
	INSTRUCTION	is fo	R FORI	REIN	E TRA	VELL,	7
(I)	1) Dedication to Prince Charles, afterwards Charles II
(2)	The Substance of	this $D_i$	sscores se,		•		9
(3)	3) Instructions for Forreine Traveil, In nineteen Sections
(4)	APPENDIX ADDED	IN SE	COND E	oi lion	, 1650
	Some direction the Levant p		travelling	nto	Turkey	and .	82

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

(a) Ussues in the Author's lifetime

I As a separate publication

1 1642 London ; vol 12mo Editio princeps see title at p 7

2 1650 [7 May ] Instructions and Directions for Forren Travell [then as London in first edition, with the addition of] With a new Appendix x vol 12mo for Travelling into Turkey and the Levant parts

(b) Assues since the Author's beath.

I As a separate publication

8 1868 15 June Lond 8vo English Reprints See title at f. 1.

SHORT ACCOUNTS OF JAMES HOWELL

Probable or approximate dates

t is impossible to give here any adequate notice of Howell's career, or of his many works both original and translative I trust, in the course of next year, 1870, to include among the 'English Reprints' a satisfactory edition of his principal work Epistolia Ho-Eliana, which grew into completeness in four successive instalments, published severally in 1645, 1647, 1650, and 1655 and in that edition to give the usual Chronicle of his Life, Works, and Times

Two short accounts of him must therefore suffice for the present.

1. A contemporary, Sergeant-Major Peter Fisher, Poet Laureate to the Protector, edited in 1664, Mr Howel's Poems upon divers Emergent Occa-In his address To the Reader, Fisher thus characterizes the works of Howell, then a Septuagenarian in years and a Patriarch in literature

"Not to know the Author of these Poems, were an Ignorance beyond Barbarism, as 'twas said of a famous person in France yet I held it super fluous to prefix his Name in the Title-Page, he being known and easily distin guished from others by his Genius and Stile, as a great Wit said lately of him,

Author Hic ex Calamo notus ut impue Leo

He may be called the product of his Age, for the variety of his Volumes for from his \( \Delta \text{top} \text{cheyin}, \text{ or Party of Trees,} \) to his \( \text{Onpolysia}, \text{ or Party of Beasts}, \) (not inferiour to the other) there hath pass'd the Press above forty of his Works on various subjects, useful not onely to the present times, but to all posterity

And 'tis observed, that in all his Writings there is something still New, either in the Matter, Method or Fancy, and in an untrodden Tract over, one may discover a kinde of Vein of Poesse to run through the body of his Prose, in the Concurnity and succinctness thereof all along

He teacheth a new way of Epistolizing, and that Familiar Letters may not onely consist of Words, and a bombast of Complements, but that they are capable of the highest Speculations and solidst kind of Knowledge

He chalks out a Topical and exact way for Forreign Travel, not roving

in general Precepts onely

In all his Histories there are the true Rules, Laws and Language of History observed.

What infinite advantages may be got by his Dictionaries and Nomenclature by all Professions and Nations !

How strongly and indeed unanswerably doth he assert the Royal Right in divers learned Tracts, to the unbeguiling and conversion of many thousands abroad as well as at home ! &-c

Touching these Poems, most of them here saw publick Light before, for I got them in Manuscripis, whereof I thought fit to give the Reader an Adver-

2 ANTHONY-A-WOOD gives this account of his life (Ath Oxon. in 744, Ed 1817)

*1594

'JAMES HOWELL was born in Caermarthenshire, particularly, as I conceive, at Abernant, of which place his father was minister. In what year he was born, I cannot precisely tell you, yet he himself saith, that his ascendant was that hot constellation of Cancer about the midst of the dog days '

[1608 Feb 20 His elder brother Thomas, of Jesus Coll. Oxon, takes his BA -Wood, Fasts Oxon ]

After he had been educated in grammar learning in the 1610 æt. 16 free-school at Hereford, he was sent to Jesus coll in the beginning of 1610, aged 16 years

[1612 July 9 1613 Dec 17 æt. 10

1618-1621.

His brother Thomas takes his M A.—Wood, Fasti Oxon 1 1 James takes his B A —Wood, Fasti Oxon 1 352 Hr otok a degree in arts, and then, being a pure cadet, a true cosmopolite, not born to land, lease, house, or office, was in a manner put to it to seek his fortune But by the endeavours of friends and some money that his father assisted him with, he travelled for three years into various countries, whereby he advantaged himself much in the understanding of several languages,' 1622. act. 28.

Some years after his return, he was sent into Spain 1662. to recover of the king of that place a rich English ship, seized on by his vice-roy of Sardinia for his master's use, upon some pretence of prohibited goods therein.'

1627. æt. 20.

'He was elected fellow of Jesus coll.'

1625. æt, 31.

'Three years after his return, he was entertained by Emanuel lord Scrope, Earl of Sunderland, and Lord President of the North, and by him was made his secretary. So that residing in York for that purpose, he was by the mayor and aldermen of Richmond chose a burgess for their corporation 1627. æt. 33. for that parliament that began at Westminster in the year 1627.

1631. æt. 37.

' Four years after he went secretary to Robert earl of Leicester, ambassador extraordinary from our king to the king of Denmark: before whom and his children he shew'd himself a quaint orator by divers Latin speeches spoken before them, shewing the occasion of their ambassy, to condole of death of Sophia, queen dowager of Denmark, grandmother to Charles I. king of England.'

'Afterwards going through several beneficial employments. particularly the assisting the clerks of the council,' he 'was at length, in the beginning of the civil war, made one of those clerks.

1642. *Sept. æt. 48.

But being prodigally inclined, and therefore running much into debt, he was seized on by order of a certain committee (after the king was forc'd from his parliament) and committed prisoner to the Fleet.

'So that having nothing to trust to but his wits, and to the purchase of a small spot of ground upon Parnassus (which he held in fee of the Muses), he solely dedicated himself to write and translate books; which, tho' several of them are meer scribbles, yet they brought him in a comfortable subsistence. during his long stay there.'
His brother Thomas consecrated Bishop of Bristol, but dies

[1644. July

1646. 1660. æt. 66.

in 1646.] 'After the King's return in 1660, we never heard of his restoration to his place of clerk of the council, (having before flatter'd Oliver and sided with the commonwealth's men), only that he was made the King's historiographer, being the first in England that bore that title; and having no beneficial employment, he wrote books to his last.'

1666. Nov. æt. 72.

At length after he had taken many rambles in this world in his younger years, and had suffered confinement in his last, he 'gave way to fate in the beginning of Novemb. in 1666 and was buried on the north side of the Temple church in London, near the round walk. Soon after was a monument set up in the wall over his grave, with this inscription thereon. Jacobus Howell Cambro-Britannus, Regius Historiographus, (in Anglia primus) qui post varias peregrinationes, tandem natura cursum peregit, satur annorum et fama, domi forisque huc usque erraticus, hic fixus 1666. This monument was pulled down in 1683, when the said Temple church was beautified and repaired.'

'He had a singular command of his pen, whether in verse or prose, and was well read in modern histories, especially in those of the countries wherein he had travelled, had a parabolical and allusive fancy, according to his motto Senesco non Segnesco. But the reader is to know that his writings having been only to gain a livelihood, and by their dedications to flatter great and noble persons, are very trite and empty, stolen from other authors without acknowledgment, and fitted only to please the humours of novices.'

Instructions for Forreine Travell.

AMUEL PURCHAS in his address To the Reader, prefixed to his celebrated Pilgrimes, 1625, thus speaks of foreign travel—

As for Gentlemen, Trauell is accounted an excellent Ornament to them, and therefore many of them comming to their Lands fooner than to their Wits, aduenture themselves to see the Fashions of other Countries, where their foules and bodies find temptations to a twofold Whoredom, whence they see the World as Adam had knowledge of good and eurll, with the losse or lessening of then estate in this English (and perhaps also in the heavenly) Paradife, and bring home a few imattering termes, flattering garbes, Apish crings, foppish fancies, foolish guises and disguises, the vanities of Neighbour Nations (I name not Naples) without furthering of their knowledge of God, the World, or themselves. I speake not against Trauell, so viefull to viefull men, I honour the industrious of the liberall and ingenuous in arts, bloud, educaand to preuent exorbitancies of the other, which cannot trauell farre, or are in danger to trauell from God and themselues, at no great charge I offer a World of Trauellers to their domefticke entertainment

In the fame fpirit, feventeen years afterwards, Howell wrote his Infruthons for Forrene Travell,—our first Handbook for the Continent He intended it as a cautionary Guide to young English gentlemen who went abroad to complete their education, and to make their first acquaintance with Life and Manners

In itfelf the book is very discursive A survey of foreign politics, much shrewd speculation in language, descriptions of foreign customs, and in particular, a notable discrimination of the differing characters of the Frenchman and the Spaniard of his day, these are mingled with the legitimate subject of the treatise: while at the close, he offers an apology for Episcopacy, and is as severe as Purchas upon home-imported foolenes So that, while the Author wanders, Pof'e-nty gains

One historic allusion may be made It is interesting to connect this Tract on Travelling with the Life of our great Epic poet John Milton, then a young man of thirty years of age, journeyed through France to Italy and back, in 1638-9 Inverting Howell's information, we may gather some impressions of Milton's foreign tour

In the prefent Reprint, the fecond edition of 1650 has been collated with the first. Its variations—mainly grammatical—are shown between [], and its Appendix has been added

The Appendix is not the result of actual observation Howell never travelled 'into Turky and the Levant parts' It is a brief memorandum compiled from general fources of information

Altogether these Instructions give us an interesting glimpse of the Continent between 1618—when Howell first went abroad, staying away three years—and 1642. They are the counsels of a man, himself notable on many accounts. A thorough Welshman, Howell became a celebrated English author in his day. He was past forty years of age before his first book was published. Then so the remaining twenty odd years of his life, with an incessant and unwearying industry, he wrote, compiled, or translated book after book, each varying greatly in subject. Lastly, he is one of the earliest instances of a literary man successfully maintaining himself with the fruits of his pen.

INSTRUCTIONS

FOR

FORREINE

TRAVELL

Shewing by what cours, and in what compasse of time, one may take an exact Surveyof the Kingdomes and States of Christendome, and arrive to the practicall knowledge of the Languages, to good purpose.

--- Post motum dulcior ande Ouies.

LONDON.

Printed by T B. for Humprey Mosley, at the Princes Armes, in Paules Church-yard. 1642.

To the growing Glory

OF

Great Brittaine. Prince CHARLES

A parallell 'twixt His Highneffe, and the Black Prince.

Sir.

Ales had one Glorious Prince of haire and hue (Which colour sticks unto Him still) like

He travell'd far, He won His spurs in France, (chance

And tooke the King, the King, o monstrous [wondrous] Then His victorious troupes afresh He gethers And with the gray Goofe-wing his shafts [ shaft] new He beats a march up the Pyrene Hils, ( fethers. And the Cantabnan clime with terror fils, To re-inthrone Don Pedro Cafule's King. Of which heroique Act all Stories ring Your Royall Sire travell'd fo far, and Thay

Of all our Princes only made that way

Who knowes, Great Sir. but by just destiny. Your bunch of (Youthfull) Plumes may further fly? But Faulcon-like, You may with full fumm'd wing The Eagle cuff, and from his tallons wring The *Prey, or in exchange feize on his Ore, And fixe Your Standard on the Indian Shore.

'Twas by ba Charles, France once the Empire got, 'Twas by a Charles the Spaniard dreue that lot, Why may not Brittaine challenge the next call, And by a CHARLES be made Imperial?

b Carolus Magnus Carol Quantus

- Sıc Vatıcınatur. * Palatinat

The Substance of this Discours.

F the advantage, and preheminence of the Eye
Of Forraine Travell, and the progresse of Learning
What previous ablities are required in a Traveller
A caveat touching his Religion
Precepts for learning the French Language
What Authors to be made choyce of, for the Government and History of France
Of Books in generall
Of Historians, and a method to reade them
Of Private Meditation
[A large discourse of the strange difference twint the disposition of the French and Spaniard]
Of Poets.
An estimat of the expences of a Nobleman, or of a private Gentleman a broad

Nstructions for travelling in Spaine
Of barren and fruitful Countreys.
The strange contrariety' twint the French and the Spainard, the reasons natural and accidental
Of their cariage, cloathing, and diet, &c Of the Spainsh Language, how to be studied, and of its affinity with the Latine.
Of Spainsh Authors
The advantage of conversing with Marchants.

Advertisements for writing of Letters

Recepts for travelling in Italy.
Of the people and Language.
Of the Republique of Venice and other States there.
What observations are most usefull in any Countrey

A digreffion into a politicall Discours of the Princes of Europe

Of croffing the Alpes, and paffing through Germany Of the Court of Bruxells, and the Netherlands

Of the wonderfull Stratagems used in those wars

The best Authors for the Belgick Story

Of the States of Holland, and their admired Industry, and Navall strength

[Cautions not to be deluded by false Manuscripts]

A Difcours of the vulgar languages of Europe, with their feverall Dialects

Of the richnesse of the English Tongue

Of the Pattuecos a People nere the heart of Spaine, never discovered til of late yeares

Of the abuse of Forrain Travell

Of S Thomas Moore Traveller

Of Ptolomeys Travellers, and of the most materiall use of Travel.

What cours a Traveller must take at his returne home Of the Pailamentary Governement of England, and her happinesse therein above other Countreys.

Of the Mathematiques, of Chymistry.

[Caveat for not Engaging too far in Chymistry]

CONTENTS OF THE APPENDIX, ADDED IN THE SECOND EDITION OF 1650.

The Extent of the Turks Dominions
The best waies for a Traveller to goe to Constantinople
Of Greece
Of Constantinople
The first sight makes the sirmest impressions
Of the Turkish Religion how it differs from others
Of their Civil Government
The speedinesse of Turkish Iustice
Of the Turkes Militia
Of their Punisments
Of their Morall behaviour
Of the Cran Cayr]

INSTRVCTIONS

FOR

Forraine Travell.

SECTION. I

Mongst those many advantages, which conduce to enrich the mind with [variety of] Knowledge, to rectify [and ascertain] the Judgement, and to] compose outward manners, [and build one up to the highest story of perfection, Peregrination, or] Forraine Travell is none of the least

But to bee a Sedentary Traveller only, penn'd up between Wals, and to stand poring all day upon a Map, [upon Artificiall Globes or Planssphares,] upon imaginary Circles and Scales, is like him, who thought to come to bee a good Fencer, by looking on Agrippa's [or Don Lius de Nervius'] book-postures only As also to run over and traverse the world by Hearefay, and traditionall relation, with other mens eyes, and so take all things upon courtesie, is but a consused and imperfect kind of speculation, which leaveth but weake and distrustfull notions behind it, in regard the Eare is not so authentique a witnesse as the Eye, because the Eye, by which as through a cleare christall Casement, wee discerne the various works of Art and Nature, and in one instant comprehend halfe the whole Vniverse in so small a roome after so admirable a manner, I say the Eye having a more quick and immediat commerce and familiarity with the Soule (being the principall of her Cing ports, and her Centinell [being as it weierher centinell, or the principal of her Cinq ports) taketh in farre deeper Ideas, and fo makes firmer and more lasting impressions, conveying the object more faithfully [and clearely] to the memory, where it remaines afterward upon [lasting] record in particular topicall notes, [markes,] and indelible characters For though I confesse with the Stagirite, that Hearing is the sense of Learning (and of Faith also, as the holy Text tels me) yet the Sight surpasseth it by many degrees sin point of activity and excellency, if [whether] you respect the curious workeman-ship [with the delicatenes] of the Organ, [and the advantage of fituation being the readiest roade to the heart, and love's best Intelligencer and Usher. As also for the penetrative apprehension of the object, with the intuitive vertue and force of affection, it worketh inwardly, as we find upon good record that a heard of Sheepe conceived once by the strength of the Eye, as likewise for the wonderfull quicknesse of this Sense, [Moreover this sense hath the prehemmence of all the rest for the wonderfull quicknes of its motion, which is fuch that it makes the effect oftentimes [seem to] fore-run the cause, as we see the Lightning, before wee Heare the Thunder, though thunder be first in Nature, being by the violent eruption it makes out of the [a] Cloud, the cause of such fulgurations. And [hereunto that] although one should reade all the Topographers that ever writ of, or anatomiz'd a Town or Countrey, and mingle Discourse with the most exact observers of the Government thereof and labour to draw and drame out of them all they possibly know or can remember. Yet one's own

Ocular view, and personall conversation will still find out something new and unpointed at by any other, either in the cariage [behaviour] or the Genus of the people, or in the Policy and municipall customes of the Countrey, or in the quality of the Clime and Soyle, and so enable him to discourse more knowingly and considently and with a kind of Authority thereof, It being an Act of pailament in sorce amongst all Nations That one Eye-witnesse is of more validity than ten Auricular

Moreover as every one is faid to abound with his owne fense, and that among the race of man-kind, Opinions and Fancies, are found to be as various as the severall Faces and Voyces, So in each individual man there is a differing facultie of Observation, of Indgement, of Application, which makes that every one is best satisfied, and most sathfully instructed by himselfe, I do not meane soley by himselfe, (for so he may have a soole to his Master) but Books also, and conversation with the Dead must concurre, so they are likewise good Teachers, and edisie infinitely, yet the study of living men, and a collation of his oven Optique observations and judgement with theirs, work much more strongly, and where these meet (I meane the living and the dead) they perfect

And indeed this is the prime use of Peregrination, which therefore may be not improperly called a moving Academy, or the true Peripatetique Schoole. This made Ulisses to be cryed up so much amongst the Greeks for their greatest wise man, because he had Travelled through many strange Countreys, and observed the manners of divers Nations, having seene, as it was said and sing of him, more Cities than there were Houses in Athens, which was much in that [green] age of the World: and the Greatest of their Emperours did use to glory in nothing so often, as that he had surveyed more Land with his Eye, than other Kings could comprehend with their thoughts.

Amongst other people of the Earth, Islanders seeme to fland in most need of Forrame Travell, for they being cut off (as it were) from the rest of the Citizens of the World, have not those obvious accesses, and contiguity of fituation, and [with] other advantages of fociety, to mingle with those more refined Nations. whom Learning and Knowledge did first Vrbanize and And [Now] as all other things by a kind of fecret inflinct of Nature follow the motion of the Sun. fo it is observed that the Arts and Sciences which are the greatest helps to Civility, and all Morall endowments as well as Intellectuall, have wheel'd about and travell'd in a kind of concomitant motion with that great Luminary of Heaven They budded first amongst the Brachmans and Gymnofophists in India, then they bloffom'd amongst the Chaldeans and Priests of Egypt whence they came down the Nile, and crossed over to Greece, and there [where] they may bee faid to have borne ripe fruit, having taken such firme rooting, and making fo long a Plantation in Athens and elfe where. Afterwards they found the way to Italy, and thence they clammer'd over the Alpian hils to visit Germany and France, whence the Britaines with other North-west Nations of the lower World fetch'd them over, and it is not improbable that the next Flight they will make, will bee to the Savages of the new discovered World [in America], and so turne round, and by this circular perambulation visit the Levantines again

Hence we fee what a Traveller Learning hath beene having in conformitie of cours, been a kind of companion to Apollo himfelfe. And as the Heavenly bodies are faid to delight in movement and perpetuall circumgyration, wherein as Pythagoras, who by the Delphian Oracle was pronounced, the wifeft man that ever Greece bredd, did hold, there was a kind of Musique and Harmonious concent that issued out of this regular motion, which we cannot perceive, because being borne in it, it is connaturall to us, so it is observed to be the Genius of all active and generous

Spirits,

Quêis meliore luto finxit præcordia Titan

[Whom Tritian with his gentle ray, Hath Moulded of a finer clay,]

To have been always transported with a defire of Travell, and not to be bounded, or confined within the shoares and narrow circumference of an Island. without ever-treading any peece of the Continent; whereas on the other fide, meane and vulgar fpirits, whose Soules fore no higher than their Sense, love to hover ever about home, lying still as it were at dead anchor, moving no further than the length of the cable, whereunto they are tyed, not daring to lance out into the maine, to fee the wonders of the deep. Such a one was hee of whom Claudian speakes, to have had his birth, breeding, and buriall in one Parish, [whence he never had fallied out the whole course of his life ] fuch flow and fluggish spirits may be faid to bee like Snailes or Tortuifes in their shels, crawling always about their own home, or like the Cymque, shut up alwayes in a Tub

Amongst other Nations of the World the English are observed to have gained much, and improved themselfes infinitely by voyaging both by Land and Sea, and of those source Worthies who compassed about the Terrestriall Globe, I find the major part of them were English, but the scope of this Discours is to prescribe precepts for Land Travell only (for the other requires another Tract apart) and first,

[Begin with Iove, then an aufpicious gale Will fill thy fayles, and to fafe harbour hale.]

SECT. II

is very requifit that hee who exposeth himselfe to the hazard of Forraine Travell, should be well grounded and settled in his Religion, the beginning and basis of all Wisdome, and somwhat versed in the

Controversies 'twixt us and fother Churches, the Church of Rome, which I prefume he hath done in the University, where (I take it for granted, hee hath been matriculated, and besides his initiation in the Arts and Sciences, and [hath] learn't to chop Logick (and [now] Logick though the be no Science of her felf. but as she is subservient to another, Like the Shoomakers Last, that may bee applyable to any foot, yet no Science can bee rightly studied without her method, nor indeed can the termes of Art be well understood. or any Scholler-like discours fram'd but by her) where I fay, [I prefume that my Traveller hath bin first an Vniverfity man, belides these studies, where besides other introductions to knowledge, he hath fucked the pure milke of true Religion, and Orthodoxall truth, and fuch a one will be rather confirmed, than shaken in the tenets of his Faith, when he feeth [the indecencies, irreuerence, and bold Prophane postures in som churches, as well as the fundry fond fantastique formes, which have crept into the folemne fervice [worship] of God, [in other places] fince the primitive times, for the practife of the Roman Church is worse than her positions, [Now for the Roman Church, he may observe that fom of her Practifes have given men more occafion of Forfaking Her, than her Positions, fo that [for] I have knowne fome, [divers] who were [being] wrought upon very far by the one, [to be] averted [from her again by the other, I meane by the multitud of her Ceremonies, which in fome places are fo mimicall, and fet forth in fuch antique postures, that it may be not improperly fayd, that they give her Enemies occasion of advantage to say, that whereas Religion

should go array'd in a grave Matron-like habit. [they vie to cloath her by the dreffes of fom Saints] they have clad her rather like a wanton Courtsfane in light dreffes [to pleafe the outward bafe and the common people | Such a one, I meane he that is well instructed in his own Religion, may passe under the torrid Zone, and not bee Sun-burnt, if he carry this bon-grace about him, or [and] like the River Danube which fcornes to mingle with the muddy streame of Sava, though they run both in one Channell, or like [the chast River] Arethufa, which Travelleth many hundred miles through the very bowels of the Sea, yet at her journeys end issueth out fresh again, without the least mixture of faltnesse or bracksshnesse. So such a one may passe and repasse through the very midst of the Roman See, [(or Geneva lake either)] and shoot the most dangerous Gulphe thereof, and yet returne home an untainted [English] Protestant, nay he will be confirmed in zeale to his owne Religion, and illuminated the more with the brightnesse of the truth thereof, by the glaring lights and fpecious glosses, which the other useth to cast, For Oppofita juxta fe posita magis elucescunt Nay the more he is encompassed with the superstitions, of the contrary, with the coldnes of some Churches and the too many ceremonies of others, the more he will bee strengthned in his own Faith, like a good Well useth to be hotter in Winter than Summer, per Antiperistafin, that is, by the coldnesse [frigidity] of the circumambient ayre, which in a manner beliegeth it round, and so makes the intrinsique heate, unite and concentre it selfe the more strongly to resist the invading Enemy

After Religion, it is fitting he should be well versed in the Topography, Government and History of his own Country, for some are sound Forus sapere, and domi executive, to be Eagles abroad, and stark Buzzards at home, being not able to satisfie a stranger by exchange of discours, in any thing touching the State of their owne Countrey.

To this end it were not amisse to run over Cambden,

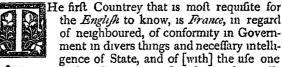

Sir Iohn Smiths Common-wealth, with those short pieces of Story, as [Heywood,] Daniel and others who have written of the English Kings since the Conquest, and extract out of them, what traverses of war, what other passages and entercourses of State have happened 'twixt us and other Nations since the last Conquest, specially the French our nearest neighbors. It is also very behoosfull, that he have a passable understanding of the Latine tongue, whereof the Italian, the Spansh, and French, are but as it were branches of the same Tree, they are but Dialects on Daughters, and having gain'd the good will of the Mother, hee will quickly prevayle with the Daughters

[It is requisite] That hee understand the use of the Map and Globe, to find out the Longitude and Latitude of all places, and to observe and compare the temper of them as hee shall passe along

Lastly [tis most fitting] that hee seriously contemplate within himfelf, how the eyes of all the World are upon Him, as his are upon the World, [let him confider] what his parents, kindred and acquaintance, yea his Prince will expect at his returne. [Let him think] That he is now in the very forge of his hopes, either upon making or marring That (being of Noble extraction) he is like to be a Star of the greatest Magnitude in the Spheare of his owne Countrey, therefore common qualities will not ferve his turne, that the higher the building is, the more it requires exquist forme and fymmetry, that Nobelity without inward ornaments is as faire guilded shels without kernels, or like a fattin doublet with canvas linings, whereas on the other fide Vertue reflecting upon a Noble subject, is as the Sunbeames falling [glancing] upon a rock of Criftall, which makes the reverberation stronger and far more refplendent, or as rich gold-embrodery, upon a piece of [Florence] Tiffue Such thoughts as these will worke much upon an ingenious Spirit, and bee as a golden Spur, to fet him forward, and cheere him in this high 10ade of Vertue, and Knowledge.

SECT III

shall have of that Language wheresoever he passe [paffeth now] further And the younger one goeth to France the better [it is], because of the hardnesse [difficulty] of the accent and pronunciation [to an english mouth], which will be hardly overcome by one who hath passed his minority, and in this point the French Tongue may bee faid to be like Fortune, who, being a woman, loves youth best Whereas for other Tongues. one may attaine to speake [the speaking of] them to very good purpose, and get their good will at any age, the French Tongue by reason of the huge difference 'twixt their writing and speaking, will put one often into fits of despaire and passion, as wee read of one of the Fathers, who threw away Perfius against the wals, saying. fi non vis intelligi debes negligi, [if thou wilt not be vnderstood go hang thy selfe; but the Learner [of French] must not bee daunted [choleric] awhit at that, but Ithough she neither writes as she speakes, nor pronounce as the writes, yet the must not shake you off so, but after a little intermission hee must come on more strongly, and with a pertinacity of resolution set upon her again and againe, and woe her as one would do a cov Mistres, with a kind of importunity, untill he overmafter her [and she will be very plyable at last]

Indeed fome of riper plants [years] are observed to over-act themselves herein, for while they labour to trencher le mot, to cut the word, as they say, and speake like naturall French-men, and to get the true genuine tone (and [now] every tongue hath a tone or tune peculiar to her self, specially the French, which hath a whining kind of querulous tone specially amongst the peasantry, which I believe proceeded from that pittifull slavery [fubjection] they are brought unto) I fay while they labour for this, they fall a lifping and mincing, and to differt and firain their mouths and voyce, fo that they render themselves fantastique and ridiculous, let it bee sufficient for one of riper yeares, to speake French intelligibly, roundly, and congruously without such forc'd affectation.

The French tongue like the [Gentry of that] Nation is a bold and hardy speach, therefore the learner must not be bashfull or meale mouth'd in speaking any thing, whatfoever it is, let it come forth confidently whither true or false Sintaxis, for a bold vivacious spirit hath a very great advantage in attaining the French, or indeed any other Language [over a foft and bashfull nature]. He must be cautelous not to force any Anglicismes upon the French Tongue, that is certaine vulgar Phiases. Proverbs, and Complements, which are peculiar to the English, and not vendible or used in French, as I heard of one that could not forbeare a great while to falute his Land-Lord by bon matin. Another would be alwayes complaining at play of his mauvaife Fortune: Another when at the racket court he had a ball ftruck into his hazard, hee would ever and anon cry out, estes vous là avec vos Ours. Are you there with your Beares? which is ridiculous in any other language but English, for every speech hath certaine Idiomes, and customary Phrases of its own, and the French, of all other, hath a kind of contumacy of phrase, in respect of our manner of speaking, proper to it selfe.

He must alwayes have a Duary about him, when he is in motion of Iourneys, to set down what seither his eares heare, or his Eyes meetes with most remarquable in the day time, out of which he may raise matter of discours at night, and let him take it for a rule, that Hee offend lesse who writes many toyes, than he, who omits one serious thing. For the Penne maketh the deepst furrowes, and doth fertilize, and enrich the memory more than any thing else, Littera scripta manet, sed manant lubrica verba.

It were very requisit to have a book of the Topo graphicall description of all places, through which hee passeth, and I think Bertuis, or the Epitome of Orteluis, which are small and portable, would bee the best At his first comming to any Citie he should repaire to the chief Church (if not Idolatrous) to offer up his sacrifice of thanks, that hee is safely arrived thither, and then some have used to get on the top of the highest Steeple, where one may view with advantage, all the Countrey circumjacent, and the site of the City, with the advenues and approaches about it, and so

take a Landskip of it

Being come to France, his best cours will be to retire to some Vniversity about the Loire, unfrequented by the English, for the greatest bane of English Gentlemen abroad, is too much frequency and communication with their own Countrey-men, and there let him apply himselfe seriously to gaine the practicall knowledge of the Language, and for the time hoc agere Which hee may doe by fludying matter as well as And This hee may do with more advantage, if hee repaires fometimes to the Courts of Pleading, and to the Publique Schooles, For in France they prefently fall from the Latine, to dispute in the vulgar tongue. So that it were not amisse for him to spend fome time in the New Academy, erected lastly by the French Cardinall in Richelieu, where all the Sciences are read in the French tongue, which is done of purpose to refine, and enrich the Language sas well as to encourage the Gentry to the Arts]

Some have used it as a prime help to advance Language, to have some ancient Nunne for a Divota, with whom hee may chat at the grates, when hee hath little else to do, for the Nunnes speake a quaint Dialect, and besides they have most commonly all the Newes that passe, and they will entertaine discours till one bee weary, if hee bestow on them now and then some small bagatels, as English Gloves or Knifs, or Ribands, and before hee go over, hee must surnish himselfe with such finall curiofities; but this I dare not advise him to this must be done with much caution], in legard the Hazard one way may bee greater, than the Advantage the other way

In this retirement he must assigne some peculiar dayes to read the History of the Countrey exactly, which is a most usefull and delightfull study. For in History, that great Treasury of Time, and promptwary of Heroique actions, there are words to speake, and works to imitat, with rich and copious matter to raise Discours upon. History, next to Eternity only triumphs over Time, she, only after God Almighty can do miracles, for shee can bring back Age past, and give life to the Dead, to whom she serves as a sacred shrine to keep their names immortall

Touching Books he must choose them, as hee should do his Friends, Few, but Choyce ones, yet he may have many Acquaintance And as for morall society, the greatest Wisdome of a man is discerned in a judicious election of his friends, which are as Commentaries upon one's selfe, and are more necessary than fire and water, as the Philosopher said So for speculative and private conversation with Authors our dead Associates, there must bee most judgement used in the choice of them, specially when there is such a constsion of them, as in France, which as Africk produceth always somthing New, for I never knew week passe in Paris, but it brought forth some new kinds of Authors, but let him take heed of Tumultuary, and designated Authors, as well as of frivolous, and pedantique.

And touching Bookes, as a noble speculative Lord of this Land said, some are to be tasted only, some chewed, and some swallowed Hereunto I will adde that some are to be diffested and anatomized into Epitomes and Notes.

To this purpose for the generall History of France, Serres is one of the best, and for the moderne times d'Aubigni, Pierre Mathieu, and du Pleix, for the politicall and martiall government, du Haillan, de la Noue, Bodin, and the Cabinet, Touching Commines, who was contemporary with Machiavil, 'twas a witty fpeach of the last Queen mother of France, that he made more Heretiques in Policy, than Luther ever did in Religion Therefore he requires a reader of riper

vears

The most difficult taske in gaining a forrain language is to tuine English into it, for to translate another Tongue into English, is not halfe so hard not profitable In reading hee must couch in a faire Alphabetique paper-book the notablest occurrences, such alliances, and encounters of warre (speciall in the last Race of the Kings) that have intervened 'twixt England and France, and fet them by themselves in Sections When he meets with any great businesse, hee must observe therein the preceding Counfels, the action it felfe, the motives of it, and the mould wherein it was cast, the progresse and even of it [with the aym and end of it], which if fuccesseful, he must note by what kind of Instruments, confederations and cours of policy it was carried, if not, where the difficulties and defects lav. The manner and method in reading of Annalists is infinitly advantagious, if one take his rife hanfomely from the beginning, and follow the feries of the matter, the Epoch of the times, and regular fuccession and contemporarinesse of Princes, otherwise if one read skippingly and by fnatches, and not take the thread of the flory along, it must needs puzzle and distract the memory, wherein his observations will live confusedly huddled up, like a skeine of intangle filk

For Sundayes and Holydayes, there bee many Treatties of Devotion in the French tongue, full of patheticall ejaculations and Heavenly raptures, and his Clofet must not be without some of these. For he must make account before hand that his Closet must bee his Church, and chiefest Chappel abroad. Therefore it were necessary when he fixeth in any place, to have alwayes one in his chamber, whether to retire early and late, to his follogues and meditations, the golden keyes wherewith hee must open and shut the day, and let in the night, and [with] deaths Cousin-german [when goeth to bed .

Peter du Moulin hath many fine pieces to this puipose, du Plessis, Allencour, and others, and let him bee conversant with such Books only upon Sundayes, and not mingle humane Studies with them. His Clofet also must be his Rendez-yous, whensoever hee is furprized with any fit of pensivenesse (as thoughts of Country and Kinred will often affect one) For no earthly thing exhilerats the heart more, and rayleth the spirits to a greater height of comfort than conversation with God, than peace with Heaven, than Spirituall Meditation, whereby the Soule melts into an inconceavable fweetneffe of delight, and is delivered from all distempers, from all tumultuary confusion and disturbance of thoughts And [Now] there is none, let him have the humors never fo well balanced within him, but is fubject unto [fuch distempers and anxiety of mind fomtimes, for while we are composed of foure differing Elements, wherewith the humours within us fymbolife we must have perpetuall ebbings and flowings of mirth and melancholy, which have their alternatif turnes in us, as naturally as it is for the night to fucceed the day: For as the Physitrans hold there is no perfection of corporall health in this life, but a convalessence at best, which is a medium 'twixt health and ficknesse, so is it in the state of the mind. There is no compleat and incontrouled comfort extends from the Lord to the Laquay, from the Peafant to the Prince, whose Crown is oftentimes inlayed with thornes, whose robe is furred with feares, whereof the Ermine is no ill Embleme, having as many black spots in it as white, Nor is there any thing fo hereditary to mankind as vexation of spirit, which doubtleffe was the ground the Pagan Philosopher built his opinion upon, that the Rationall foule was given to Man, for his felfe punishment and martyrdome, — Man often is A tyrant to himseffe, a Phalaris.

But as when we go abroad, we cannot hinder the birds of the ayre to fly and flutter about our heads, yet we may hinder them to roost or neftle within our haire. So while we travaile in this life, we cannot prevent but myriads of melancholy cogitations, and [fwarmes of] thoughtfull cares and longings will often feaze upon our imaginations, yet we may hinder these thoughts to build their nests within our bosomes, and [or] to descend from the head to the heart and take sooting there, if they do, I told you before, what's this best coidiall to expell them thence.

There bee some French Poets will affoord excellent entertainment, specially Du Bartas, and 'twere not amisse to give a slight salute to Ronzard, Desportes, and the late Theopile And touching Poets, they must be used like slowers, some must be only [some serve only to be] smelt unto, but some are good to bee thrown into a Limbique [and] to be Distilled, whence the memory may carry away the Elixir of them, for true Poetry is the quintessence, or rather the Luxury of Learning Let him runne over also the Proverbs of every Countrey, and cull out the choicest of them, for many of them carry much weight, wit, and eaution, with them

And every Nation hath certaine Proverbs and Adages peculiar to it felfe, Neither would it be time ill fpent to reade Æfope in every tongue, and make it his taske to relate fome Fable every day to his Governor or fome other by heart.

Thus the life of a Traveller is spent either in Reading, in Meditation, or in Discours by the first hee converseth with the Dead, by the second with Himselfa by the last with the Living, which of all the three is most advantagious for attaining a Language, the life whereof consists in societie and communication, let his Chamber be street ward to take in the common cry and Language, and [to] see how the Town is served [and the world wags about him], for it will bee no unprofitable diversion to him, but for his Closet let it bee in the inner part.

SECT IV

Aving by the retirement aforefaid attained to a converfable Knowledge in the French tongue, hee may then adventure upon Paris, and the Court, and visit Ambassadors, and going in the equipage of a young

Nobleman, hee may entertaine a Cook, a Laquay, and fome young [French] youth for his Page, to parley and chide withall, (whereof he shall have ocasion enough) and to get fome faire lodgings to keep house of himself, and [but] fometimes he may frequent Ordinaries, for it will much breake and enbolden him. As for expences. he must make accompt that every servant he hath (whereof there should be none English but his Governour) every one will stand him in 50 pounds a piece per annum: And for his owne expences, he cannot allow himselfe lesse than 300 l I include herein all forts of exercises, his Riding, Dancing, Fencing, the Racket, Coach-hire, with other cafuall charges, together with his Apparell, which if it bee fashionable, it matters not how plaine it is, it being a ridiculous vanity to go gaudy amongst Strangers in a strange Country, specially in France, it is, as if one should light a candle to the Sun

The time that he spends in Paris, must be chiefly employed to improve himselse in the exercise aforesaid, for there the choycest Masters are of any part of Christendome. Hee must apply himselse also to know the fashion and garb of the Court, observe the Person and Genius of the Prince, enquire of the greatest Noble-men, and their Pedigree (which I recommend to his speciall consideration) of the Favorits and Prime Counselsors of State, the most eminent Courtiers, and if there bee any famous man, to seek conversation with him, for it was the saying of a great Emperour, that he had rather go sifty miles to heare a wise man, than five to see a faire City.

For private Gentlemen and Cadets, there be divers Academies in Paris, Colledge-like, where for 150 pif tols a yeare, which come to about 110 l fterling per annum of our money, one may be very well accommodated, with lodging and diet for himselfe and a man, and be taught to Ride, to Fence, to manage Armes, to Dance, Vault, and ply the Mathematiques

There are in Paris every week commonly fome Odde, Pamphlets and Pafquils dispersed, and drop'd up and down, for there is no where else that monstrous liberty (yet London hath exceeded her farre now of late, the more I am fory) which with the Gazets and Courants hee should do well to reade weekly, and iaise Discours thereon, for though there be many trivial passages in them, yet are they couched in very good Language, and one shall seel the generall pulse of Christendome in them, and know the names of the most famous men that are up and down the World in action

Some do use to have a small leger booke fairely bound up table-book-will [table-book wise], wherein when they meet with any person of note and eminency, and journey or pension with him any time, they desire him to write his Name, with some short Sentence, which they call The mot of remembrance, the perusall whereof will fill one with no unpleasing thoughts of dangers and accidents passed

One thing I must recomend to his speciall care, that he be very punctuall in writing to his Friends once a month at least, which hee must do exactly, and not in a carelesse persunctory way, For Letters are the Ideas and truest Miror of the Mind, they show the inside of a man, and by them it will be discerned how he improveth himselfe in his courses abroad there will be plenty of matter to fill his letters withall once a month at least. And by his Missives let it appeare that he doth not only Remember, but meditate on his Friend; not to scribble a few cursory lines, but to write elaborately and methodically, and thereby hee will quickely come to the habit of writing well And [Now] of all kind of Humane Meditations, those of ones absent Friends be the pleasings, specially when they are endeared and nourished by correspondence of Letters, which by a Spirituall kind of power do [can] enamour, and mingle Soules more sweetly than any embraces

SECTION V.

Aving Wintered thus in Paris, that hudge (though durty) Theater of all Nations (and Winter is the fittest season to be there) and plyed [alfo] his exercises to some perfection, the fittest Countrey for him to see next is Spaine, and in his Iourney thither he shall traverse the whole diameter of France one way, and passing through Gascoigne and Languedoc, hee shall prepare himselfe by degrees to endure the heate of the Spansh clime. let him not encumber himselse with much loggage. and for his Apparell, let him as foon as he enters Spaine go after their fashion, for as a Spaniard lookes like a bug-beare in France in his own cut, so a Frenchman appeares ridiculous in Spaine: nor would I advise him to cary about him any more money than is absolutly necessary to defray his expences, for some in this particular have beene Peny-wife and Pound-foolish. who in hopes of fome fmall benefit in the rates, have left [loft] their principall, exposing their Perfons and Purfes, to dayly hazard, and inviting (as it were) unto them danger for their Companion, and feare for their bed-fellow.

For although Sir Thomas More wishesh one to carry always his Friends about him, abroad, by which hee meanes pieces of gold: Yet too great a number of such Friends, is an encomber and may betray him. It will make his Iourney all along to be a Motus trepidations. And he that loades himselfe with a charge of money, when he may carry it about him with such security, and ease, in a small piece of paper, I meane a Letter of credit, or Bill of exchange; is as wise as he, who carried the coach-wheele upon his back, when he might have trilled it before him all along

In Spaine hee must bee much more carefull of his diet, abstemious from fruit, more reserved and cautelous in his Discours, but entertaine none at all touching Religion, unlesse it be with Silence, a punctuall repaire of visits, extraordinary humble in his comportment, for the Spaniards, of all other, love to be respected at their own homes, and cannot abide an infolent carrage in a Stranger, On the other fide, Courtese and Morigeration, will gaine mightily upon them, and courtefie is the chiefest cognifance of a Gentleman, which joyned with discretion, can only Travaile all the World over without a Paffebort, and of all forts of Friends, he is the cheapest who is got by Courtesie, and Complement only Moreover a respectfull and humble canage, is a mighty advantage to game Intelligence and Knowledge. It is the Key that opens the breast, and unlocks the heart of any one. He that looked downeward, faw the Stars in the water, but he who looked only upward could not fee the water in the Stars: therefore there is much more to bee got by Humility than otherwise.

One thing I would diffwade him from, which is from the excessive commendation and magnify[1]ng of his own Countrey, for it is too much observed, that the English fuffer themselves to be too [over] much transported with this fubject, [ufing] to undervalue and vilifie other Countreys, for which I have heard them often cenfured Earth is the Lords, and all the corners thereof, he created the Mountaines of Wales, as well as the Wiles of Kent, the rugged Alpes, as well as the Fertile plaines of Campagnia, the boggy fennes of Frizeland, as well as the daintiest Valleys [Champions] in France, and to inveigh against, or deride a Countrey for the barrenesse thereof, is tacitly [by inference] to taxe God Almighty of Improvidence and Partiality And it had beene wished, some had beene more temperate in this theme at their being in the Spanish Court, in the yeare 1623 For my part, as the Great Philosopher holds it for a maxime. that Mountaignous people, are the most pious, so are they observed to be the hardiest, as also the barrener a Countrey is, the more Masculine and Warlike the spirits of the Inhabitants are, having as it were more of men in them; Witnesse the Scythian and Goth, and other roughhewen hungry Nations, which so often over-ranne Italy, for all her Policy and Learning, and herein Nature may seeme to recompence the hard condition of a

Countrey the other way

Having passed the Pyreneys hee shall palpably discerne (as I have observed in another larger Discours) the fuddenest and strangest difference 'twixt the Genius and Gaib of two People, though distant but by a very fmall fenaration, as betwixt any other upon the furface of the Earth, I knowe Nature delights and triumphs in dissimilitudes, but here, shee seemes to have industriously, and of set purpose studied it, for they differ not onely Accidentally and Outwardly in their Cloathing and Carrage, in their Diet, in their Speaches and Customes, but even Effentially in the very faculties of the Soule, and operations thereof, and in every thing elfe. Religion and the forme of a Rationall creature only excepted, which made Doctor Garcia thinke to aske a Midwife once, whither the Frenchman and Spaniard came forth into the World in the same posture from the womb or no.

Go first to the Operations of the Soule, the one is Active and Mercuriall, the other is Speculative and Saturnine the one Quick and Ayry, the other Slow and Heavy; the one Discoursive and Sociable, the other Reserved and Thoughtfull, The one addicts himselfe for the most part to the study of the Law and Canons, the other to Positive and Schoole Divinity; the one is Creatura sine Praterito et Futuro, the other hath too much of both, the one is a Prometheus, the other an Epinetheus; the one apprehends and forgets quickly, the other doth both slowly, with a judgement more abstruce and better fixed, et in se reconditum, the one will dispatch the weightiest affaires as hee walke along in the ftreets, or at meales, the other upon the least occasion of businesse will retire solemnly to a room, and if a Fly chance to humabout him, it will discompose his thoughts, and puzzle him. It is a kind of sicknesse for a Frenchman to keep a Secret long, and all the drugs of Egypt cannot get it out of a Spaniard

The French capacity, though it apprehend and affent unto the Tenets of Faith, yet he resteth not there, but examines them by his owne reason, debates the businesse pro et contra, and so is often gravelled upon the quick sands of his own brain, the Spaniara cleane contrary by an implicite Faith and general Obedience believes the Canons and Determination of the Church, and presently subjects his Understanding thereunto, he sets bounds to all his Wisdome and Knowledge, and labours to avoyd all Speculation [doubtings and dissertation] thereon, searing through the frailty of his Intellectuals, to fall into some Error

Go to their Garb and Clothing, the one weares long haire, the other short, the one goes thin and open clad, the other close and warm, so that although the Sun should dart down his raves like lances upon him, yet he could not bee brought to open one button of his doublet, the one goes gay without, the other underneath, the one weares his Cloake long, the other short, fo, that one might give him a Suppositor with his Cloake about him, if need were; the one puts on his Doublet first, the other last, the Frenchman buttoneth alwayes down-ward, the Spaniard upward; the one goes high-heeled, the other low and flat, yet looks as high as the other, the one carieth a Combe and Looking-glasse in his pocket, the other a piece of bayes to wipe off the dust of his shooes And if the one hath a Fancy to flars [ flarch] his mustachos, the other hath a leather bigothero to lve upon them all night, the first thing the one pawns, being in necessity, is his Shirt, the other his Cloak, and fo by degrees his Caffoke goes off, and then his Doublet: the one cares more for the Back, and outward appearance, the other prefers the Belly. the one is constant in his fashion, for the other 'tis impossible to put him in a constant kind of Habit,

You may as foone

Cut out a kirtle for the Moone

Go to their Diet, the one drinkes Watered Wine, the other Wine watered, the one begins his repast, where the other ends, the one begins with a Sallet, and light meat, the other concludeth his repast so, the one begins with his boyled, the other with his roast, the Frenchman will Eate and Talke, and Sing sometimes, and so his Teeth and his Tongue go often together, the Spamards Teeth only walk, and fals closely to it with as little noyse and as solemnly as if he were at Masse

Go to their Gate, the Frenchman walks fast, (as if he had a Sergeant always at his heeles,) the Spaniard flowly, as if hee were newly come out of some quartan Ague; the French go up and down the streets confusedly in clusters, the Spamards if they be above three, they go two by two, as if they were going a Procession; the French Laquays march behind, the Spaniards before, the one beckens upon you with his hand cast upward, the other downward, the Frenchman will not flick to pull out a Peare or some other thing out of his pocket, and eate it as he goes along the street, the Spamard will starve rather than do fo, and would never forgive himfelfe, if he should commit such a rudenesse, the Frenchman if he fpies a Lady of his acquaintance, he will make boldly towards her, falute her with a kiffe, and offer to Viher her by the hand or arme, the Spaniard upon such an encounter, ufeth to recoyle backward, with his hands hid under his Cloack, and for to touch or kiffe her, he holds it a rudenesse beyond all barbarisme, a kind of facriledge, the Frenchmen is best and most proper on Horseback, the Spaniard a foot, the one is good for the Onlet, the other for a retrait the one like the Wind in the Fable, is full of ruffling fury, the other like the Sun, when they went to try their strength upon the Passengers Cloake The one takes the ball before the bound. A la volce, the other stayeth for the fall, the one fhuffleth the Cards better, the other playes his game more cunningly, your French-man is much the fairer Duellist, for when hee goeth to the Field, he commonly puts off his doublet and opens his breast, the Spaniard cleane contrary, besides his shirt, hath his doublet quilted, his coat of maile, his cassock, and strives to make himselfe impenetrable

Go to their Tune, the one delights in Ionique, the other altogether in the Dorique

Go to their Speech, the one Speakes oft, the other feldome, the one Fast, the other flowly; the one mangleth, cuts off, and eates many Letters, the other pronounceth all, the one contracts and enchances his words, and speakes pressingly and short, the other delights in long breathed Accents, which he prolates with such pauses, that before he be at the period of his Sentences, one might reach a Second thought. The ones Mind and Tongue go commonly together (and the first comes sometimes in the arreare) the others Tongue comes stagging a fourlong after his mind, in such a distance, that they seldome or never meet and justle one another.

In fine Mercury swayeth ore the one, and Saturne ore the other, insomuch that out of the premises, you may inferre, that there is an Intellectuall, Politicall, Morall and Naturall op[p]osition between them both in their Comportement, Fancies, Inclinations, Humours, and the very Understanding, so that one may say, What the one is, the other is not, and [all this] in such a visible discrepancy, that if one were setched from the remotest parts of the Earth, [which] the Sunne displayeth his beames upon, yea from the very Antipods, he would agree with either better, than they do one with another.

SECT. VI.

Nd truly I have many times and oft bufied my fpirits, and beaten my brains hereupon, by taking information from dead and living men, and by my own practicall obfervations, to know the true cause of this strange antipathy betwirt two such potent and so neare neighbouring Nations, which bringeth with it such [so great a] mischiese into the World, and keepes Christendome in a perpetuall alarme. For although the Ill Spirit bee the principall Author thereof, as being the Father and fomenter of all discord and hatred (it being also part of the Turkes letany, that warres should continue still betweene these two potent Nations) to hinder the happy fruit that might grow out of their Vinon yet neverthelesse it must bee thought that hee cannot shed this poyson, and sow these cursed tares, unlesse hee had some grounds to work his designe upon

And to fly to the ordinary termes of Sympathy and Antipathy, I know it is the common refuge of the ignorant, when being not able to conceive the true reason of naturall Actions and Passions in divers things, they fly to indefinite generality, and very often to these inexplicable

termes of Sympathy and Antipathy

Some as Doctor Garcia, and other Philosophicall Authors, attribute this opposition to the qualities of the clymes and influences of the Stars, which are known to beare fway over all Sublunary bodies, infomuch that the position of the Heavens, and Constellations, which hang over Spaine, being of a different vertue and operation to that of France, the temper and humours of the Natives of the one, ought to bee accordingly disagreeing with the other.

An opinion which may gaine credit and strength from the authority of the famous Hippocrates, who in his Book of Ayre, Water, and Climes, affirmeth that the diversity of Constellations, cause a diversity of Inclinations, of humors and complexions, and make the bodies whereupon they operate, to receive fundry sorts of impressions Which reason may have much apparance of truth, if one consider the differing fancies of these two Nations, as it hath reference to the Predominant Constellations, which have the vogue, and qualifie the Seasons amongst them.

For then when the heate beginneth in Spaine, the violence thereof lastet a long time without intension, or remission, or any considerable change, the humour of the Spaniard is just so, for if he resolves once upon a thing he perseveres, he ponders and dwels constantly upon it, without wavering from his first deliberation, it being one of his prime axiomes, that Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum est semel

It is farre otherwise in France, for be it Sommer or Winter, Autumne or Spring, neither the cold nor heate, nor serenity of Ayre continueth nere so long, without a sensible vicisitude and change, so that it may be truly said there in the morning, Nescis quid serus Vesper trahat.

Therefore it being granted that all Elementary bodies depend upon the motion and vertue of the Heavenly, the people of France must of necessity partake of the inconstancy of the Clime, both in their passions and dispositions. But this reason though probable enough, resolves not the

But this reason though probable enough, resolves not the question to the full, for although we should acknowledge, that the Celestrall bodies by their instructions, do domineere over Sublunary creatures, and tosse and tumble the humours and the masse of bloud, as they list, it cannot be said, notwithstanding, that this virtue extends to those actions that depend immediatly upon the absolute empire of the Will, with the other faculties and powers of the soulce, which are meerely Spirituall, as Love and Hatred, with the like.

They that diffute thus, have much reason on their side, yet if we consider well the order and method that our Understanding and Wils do use in the production of their actions, we shal find, that the influence of the Heavenly bodies must have something to do therein, though indirectly and accidentally for all Terrestrial creatures by a gradual kind of subordination, being governed by the Heavenly, it must needs follow that whatsoever is naturall in man, as the organs of the body, and all the senses must seek the power of their instuence

Now is the Soule so united and depends so farre upon the senses, that she cannot produce any act, unlesse they ministerially concurre and contribute thereunto, by present ing the matter to her, which is the intelligibles species. Whence it necessarily comes to passe, that in regard of this straight league and bond, which is between them, she partakes somewhat, and yealds to that dominion, which the Starres have over the sensual appetite, which together with the Will, are dispossed off, and incited (I will not say forced) by their instances

And as that famous Wisard, the oldest of the Trismegeli, and hold, that the Intelligences which are affixed to every Spheare, doe worke through the organs of the body upon the faculties of the mind, (an opinion almost as old as the World it selfe) so it may be faid more truly, that by the sensuall appetite, by the frailty and depravation of the will, the Heavenly bodies worke very farre upon the Spirituall Powers and passions of the Soule, and affect them diversly, though by accident and indirectly, as I said before. The position therefore of the Heavens and Aferismes, which governe the Spanish Clime, being different in their vertue and operations to them of France, the Minds and Fancies of both People, must by a necessary consequence bee also different.

Yet [But] notwithstanding that this assertion be true, yet it doth not follow, that the Influxions of the Starres and diversity of Climes, are the sole cause of this Antipathy and Aversenssels, for there are many Nations which live under faire more distant and differing Climes, which disaffect not one another in that degree, therefore there must be some other concurring Accidents and extraordinary motive of this evill

I reade it vpon record in the Spansh Annales, that Lewis the eleventh desiring a personall Conference with the King of Castile, they both met upon the borders, the Spaniards came full of Iewels and Gold Chaines and richely apparelled. Lewis, though otherwise, a wise and gallant Prince, yet had he an humou of his own, to weare in his hat a Medaille of Lead, which he did at his enterview, nor were his attendants, but Regis ad Exemplum, but meanely accounted, which made the Spaniards despite them, and make disdainefull Libels of them, which broake out afterwards into much contempt and difaffethon, which came to bee aggravated more and more

And if we say that the Devill made use of this occasion to engender that violent Hatred, which raignes between these two Nations, it would not bee much from the purpose, for the least advantage in the World is sufficient for him to insuse his venom where he sinds hearts never so little disposed to receive it, either by naturall or continuent causes

Adde hereunto the vast extent of greatnesse the Spanuard is come to within these Sixe fiore yeares, by his fundry new acquest, which fils the French full of jealousies, of emulation, and apprehension of seare, and 'tis an olde Aphonsse, Oderunt omnes, quem metuunt.

Furthermore, another concurring motive may be, that there passe usually over the Pyreneys, from Gascongne and Bearne great numbers of poore French tatter-dimallians, being as it were the Scumme of the Countrey, which do all the fordid and abject offices to make a purse of money, whereof Spaine is fuller than France, from Spaine also there come to France many poore Spaine also there come to France many poore Spaine of both Nations measuring the whole by the part, and thinking all to be such, it must needs breed mutuall apprehensions of distance and aversion between them, so that what was at first Accidentall seemes in tract of time, and by these degrees to diffuse it selfe like Originall sinne from Father to Sonne, and become Naturall

But I have beene transported too farre by this speculation, considering that I proposed to my selfe brevity at first in this small discours

SECT. VII.

Nd now being come from France to Spaine, make accoump for matter of fertility of loyle, that you are come from Gods blefsing, to the warme Sun, who is fomewhat too liberall of his beames here; which makes the ground more barren, and confequently to be a kind of Wildernesse in comparison of France, if you respect the number of People, the multitude of Townes, Hamlets, and Houses for about the third part of the continent of Spaine is made up of huge craggie Hils and Mountaines, amongst which one shall feele in some places more difference in point of temper of heat and cold in the ayre, then 'twixt Winter and Sommer under other Climes But where Spaine hath water and Valleis there she is extraordinarily fruitfull fuch blefsings humility carreth alwayes with her So that Spaine yeeldeth to none of her neighbours in perfection of any thing, but only in Plenty, which I believe was the ground of a Proverbe they have amongst them, No ay cofa mala en Espana, sino lo que habla, there is nothing ill in Spaine, but that which speakes And did Spaine excell in Plenty, as the doth in perfection of what the produceth, especially did she abound in Corne, whereof fhe hath not enough for the fortieth mouth [month], as also had she Men enough whereof, besides the Warres, fo many Colomes draine her, shee would prove formidable to all her Neighbours

But let the French glory never fo much of their Country as being the richest embroidery of Nature upon Earth, yet the Spaniard drinks better Wine, eates better Fruits, weares finer Cloth, hath a better Sword by his side, [goes better shod] and is better Mounted than he.

Being entred Spaine, he must take heed of Posting in that hot Countrey in the Summer time, for it may furre the masse of bloud too much. When hee comes to Madrid (for I know no other place secure enough for a Protestant Gentleman to live in, by reason of the residence of our Ambassador [, though Merchants be free every where]) he may take new Spainsh servants, for I presume he discharged his French when he forsooke Paris: There hee shall find the King constant all the Seasons of the years in the midst of his Kingdom, as the heart in the body, or the Sun in the Firmament, whence the one giveth vigor to the little world, thiother to the great in equall proportion. And the first thing he must fall to, is Language, which hee shall find far more easie than the French, for in point of crabbednesse there is as much difference betweene the French and Spanssh, as 'twixt Logique and [Naturall] Philosophy, the like may be said of the Italian, for a reasonable capacity may attaine both these Languages, sooner than French it selfe

There was a Spanish Doctor, who had a fancy that Spanish, Italian, and French, were spoken in Paradise, that God Almighty commanded in Spanish, the Tempter perswaded in Italian, and Adam begged pardon in French.

I prefume by the helpe of his Governour he hath made an introduction into the Spanish tongue before hee left France, so that in one Sommer and Winter he may eafily come to speake it discoursively, and to good purpose, being in my judgement the easiest of all Languages, by reason of the openesse, and fulnesse of pronunciation, the agreement 'twixt the Tongue and the Text, and the freedome [it hath] from Apostrophes, which are the knots of a Language, as also for the proximity it hath with the Latine, for the Spanish is nought else but mere Latine, take a few Morifico words away, which are eafily diftinguished by their gutturall pronunciation, and these excepted, it approacheth nearer and resembleth the Latine more than Italian, her eldest Daughter, for I have beaten my braines to make one Sentence good Italian and congruous Latin, but could never do it, but in Spanish it is very feafable, as for Example, in this Stanza.

> Ínfausta Grecia tu paris Gentes, Lubricas, fodomiticas, dolosas, Machinando fraudes cautelosas, Rumando animas innocentes. etc

which is Latin good enough, and yet is it vulgar

Spanish, intelligible by every Plebeian.

Mariana and Acosta, are the most authentique Annalysis of Spaine, and Alvares for the moderne story, Lope de Vegas works wil give good entertainment for Verse, and Guevara for pure Prose: Nor shall he be distracted with that confusion of Authors, as in France, and else where, for the Spanard writes feldom but foundly, and in a quite differing straine from other Nations of Christendome, savouring rather of an African sancy, which argues that the Moore did much mingle with him.

About the fall of the leafe it were not amise to make a journey to South Spaine, to see Sevill, and the Contratation House of the West Indies, and (if he can) to get a coppy of the Constitutions thereof, which is accounted the greatest Mystery in the Spainsh Government, but he must shew himself neither too busie, nor too bold in this search, And if he be there at the arrivall of the Plate-Fleet, which usually commeth about that time, he shall see such a Grandeza, that the Roman Monarchy in her highest florish never had the like, nor the Gran Signior at this day

There he may converse with Marchants, and their conversation is much to bee valued, for many of them are very gentile and knowing men in the affaires of the State, by reason of their long sojourne and actuall negotiations, and [law] processes in the Countrey: and in a short time, one may fuck out of them, what they have been many yeares a gathering. And very materiall it is to know here, as every where elfe, what commodities the Countrey affoordeth most usefull for us, either for necessity or pleasure. And what English commodities are there in greatest request, and what proportions the Market usually beareth, for in the commutative part of Government and Mercantile affaires, lieth the most ufefull part of policy 'twixt Countrey and Countrey; but this hee shall observe better in Italy, where the Prince holdeth it no disparagement to co-adventure, and put in his stake with the Marchant. So that the old Clodian Law is now of no force at all amongst them.

From South Spaine he may returne by Granada, Murcia and Valencia, and fo to Barcelona, and then take the Gallies for Italy, for there are divers Fleets passe in the yeare from thence with treasure, and crosse the Mediterranean to Genoa And it is not amisse to see something by Sea, and to embarque in a Fleet of Galhes will much adde to ones experience, and knowledge in Sea affaires, and in the Art of Navigation, which is more usefull and important for Englishmen, and indeed for all Islanders, than others, because their security depends upon the Sea, and upon woodden Horses

Naviget hinc alia jam mihi linter aqua.

SECT VIII.

Aving put foot ashoare in Genoa, I will not wish him to stay long there, in regard the very worst Italian dialect is spoken there, and besides, as it is proverbially said, there are in Genoa, Mountaines without wood, Sea without fish, Women without shame, and Men without confinence, which makes them to be termed the white Moores And when a Few (and the Fews are held the most Mercuriall people in the World, by reason of their so often transmigrations, persecutions, and Necessity, which is the Mother of Wit) [I say when a Few] meeteth with a Genoway, and is to negotiat with him, he puts his singers in his eyes, searing to be overseached by him, and outmatched in cunning.

From thence let him haften to Tofcany, to Siena, where the prime Italian dialect is fpoken, and not furre thence till he be mafter of the Language in fome measure.

And being now in Italy that great limbique of working braines, he must be very circumspect in his cariage, for she is able to turne a Saint into a Devill, and deprave the best natures, if one will abandon himselfe [to pleasure], and become a prey to dissolut courses and wantonnesse

The Italian, being the greatest embracer of pleasures, [and] the greatest Courtier of Ladies of any other Herehe shall find Vertue and Vice, Love and Hatred, Atheisme and Religion in their extremes, being a witty contemplative people; and Corruptio optimi est pessiona. Of the best wines you make your tartest vinegar

Italy hath beene alwayes accounted the Nurse of Policy, Learning, Musique, Architecture, and Limning, with other persections, which she disperset to the rest of Europe, nor was the Spaniard but a dunce, till he had taken sooting in her, and so grew subtilized by co-alition with her people She is the prime climat of Complement, which oftentimes puts such a large distance twick the tongue and the heart, that they are seldome relatives, but they often give the lye one to another; some will offer to kisse the hands, which they wish were cut off, and would be content to light a candle to the Devill, so they may compasse their owne ends. He is not accounted essentially wise, who openeth all the boxes of his breast to any

The Italians are for the most part of a speculative complexion (as I have discovered more amply in another Discours) and he is accounted little lesse than a soole, who is not melancholy once a day, they are only bountifull to their betters, from whom they may expect a greater benefit, To others the purse is closest shut, when the mouth openeth widest, nor are you like to get a cup of wine there, unlesse your grapes be known to be in the wine-presse.

From Siena he may passe to Milan, and so through the Republiques territories to Venice where he shall behold a thing of wonder, an Impossibility, a rich magnificent City seated in the very jaws of Neptune, where being built and bred a Christian from her very infancy, (a Prerogative she justly glorieth of above all other States,) she hath continued a Virgin ever since, nere upon twelve long ages, under the same forme and face of Government, without any visible change or symptome of decay, or the least wrinkle of old age, though, her too neer neighbour, the Turk had often set upon her skirts and sought to deslower her, wherein he went so farr that he took from her Venus ioynture, [I meane the Iland of Ciprus,] which she had long possessed, and was the sole Crown she ever wore But if one in Story observes the cours of her actions, he shall find that she hath subsisted thus long as much by Policy as Armes, as much by reach of Wit, and advantage of treaty, as by open strength, it having beene her practise ever and anon to sow a piece of Fox tayle to the skinne of S. Marks Lyon.

Here one shall find the most zealous [and politicall] Patriots of any [place], yet some would maintaine (though I do not) that the Venetians, are but indifferently wife single, though they be very Politique when they are together in the Senat

Having observed in the Republique of Venice what is most remarquable (and there are many things in that Government worth the carying away, specially the fight of Nova Palma, a Castle built after the newest rules of Fortification) he may visit the other ancient Townes of Italy, and fo to Naples, where he may improve his knowledge in Horfmanship, and then repasse through other free States, whereof Italy is full. And truly a wonder it is to fee how in fo fmall an extent of ground, which take all dimensions together, is not so big as England, there should bee so many absolute and potent Princes by Sea and Land, which I believe is the cause of so many Dialetts in the Italian tongue which are above ten in number: As hee traverseth the Countrey hee must note the trace, forme and site of any famous Structure, the Platforms of Gardens, Aqueducts, Grots, Sculptures, and fuch particularities belonging to accommodation or beauty of dwelling, but specially of Caftles, and Fortreffes, wherewith Italy abounds, the whole Countrey being frontier almost all over

In the perambulation of Italy young Travellers must be cautious, among divers other to avoyd one kind of Furbery or cheat, whereunto many are subject, which is, that in som great Townes, specially Rome and Venice, there are certain Brokers of manuscripts, who are no other then Mountibanks in that kind, that use to infinuate themselves to the society of strangers, and bring them with a fnew of refervedenesse such and fuch papers magnifying them for rare extraordinary peeces, and dangerous to bee divulg'd, whereas they prove oftentimes old flat things that either are printed already in Te, oro politico, Boterus, or Bodin, Or they are fome abfolet peeces reflecting happily upon the times of Cosmo de Medici, or touching the expulsion of the Jesuits out of the territories of St Marc, or the creation of some Pope, and such like, which do nothing at all advantage one to be acquainted with the present face of things, In the Court of Spain there are likewise such Interlopers, and I have known divers Dutch Gentlemen grofly guld by this cheat, and fom English bor'd also through the nose this way, by paying excessive prices for them.]

SECTION IX.

Nd with the naturall situation of Countreyes, a Traveller should observe also the Political position thereof, how some are seated like Mercury amongst the Planets, who for the most part is either in combustion or obscurity, being under brighter beames than his own, Such is Savoy and Loraine, and other Princes of Italy, who are between more potent neighbours than themselves, and are like skreens toffed up and down and never at quiet. And they that are so situated may say, as the Mouse once answered the Cat, who asking how she did, made answer, I should be far better, if you were further off

How the state of the Popedome running from the Irrrhene to the Adriatique Sea, is sited in Italy, as France is in Europe, in the midst, and fo fittest to embroyle or preserve in peace, to defunite or conjoyne the forces of their neighbours, and fo most proper to be Umpires of all quarrels.

How the Dominions of Spaine are like the Planets in the Heaven lying in vast uneven distances one from the other But cleane contrary those of France, are so knit and clustered together, that they may be compared all to one fixed constellation

How Germany cut out into so many Principalities, into so many Hansiatiqued and Imperiall Townes, is like a great River fluced into fundry Channels, which makes the maine streams farre the weaker. The like

may be faid of Italy

How the Signory of Venice is the greatest rampart of Christendome against the Turk by Sea, and the hereditary territories of the house of Austria, by Land, which may be a good reason of State, why the Colledge of Electors hath continued the Empire in that Line these 200 years

He must observe the quality of the power of Princes, how the Cavalry of France, the Infantery of Spaine, and the English Ships, leagued together, are fittest to conquer the World, to pull out the Ottoman Tyrant out of his Seraglio, from betweene the very armse of his fifteen hundred Concubines

How the power of the North-East part of the European World is balanced between the Dane, the Swede, and the Pole, etc. And the 1est between great Britaine, France, and Spaine, as for Germany and Italy, their power being divided twixt so many, they serve only to balance themselves, who if they had one absolute Monarch a piece, would prove terrible to all the rest

Spaine in point of treafure hath the advantage of them al, She hath a Veteran Army always afoot; but She is thinne peopled, She hath many Colonies to Jupply, which lye Jquandered up and down in difadvantagious unfocable distances. Her people are disaffected by most nations, and incompatible with some, She wants bread, She hath bold accessible coasts, and Her West Indy Fleet, besides the length of the passage, and incertainty of arrivall, is subject to casualties of Sea, and danger of interception by Enemies. And if England should breake out with Her in good earnest into acts of hostility, those

In fine, with these particulars, a Traveller should observe the likenesse and sympathy of distant Nations, as the Spamard with the Irish, the French with the Pole, the German (specially Holsteinmen) with the English, and in Italy there have beene many besides my felfe, that have noted the countenance and condition of some people of Italy, specially those that inhabite Lombardy, to draw neere unto the ancient Brittaines of this Island, which argues, that the Romanes, who had their Legions here fo many hundred yeares together, did much mingle and clope with them Amongst other particulars, the old Italian tunes and rithmes both in concerpt and cadency, have much affinity with the Welsh, (and the genius of a people is much discovered by their profody) for example,

Vlisse o lasso, o dolce Amor' i' muoro, etc

This agrees pat with the fancy of the Welch Bards, whose greatest acutenesse consists in Agnominations and in making one word to tread as it were upon the others heele, and push it forward in like letters, as in the precedent example, whereof many Italian Authors are full, appeareth

SECT X.

E must also observe the number of Languages and difference of Dialects, as neere as he can, in every Countrey as hee paffeth along.

The French have three dialects, the Wallon (vulgarly called among themselves Romand,) the Provenfall, (whereof the Gafcon is a fubdialect) and the speech of Languedoc. They of Bearne and Navarre speak a Language that hath affinity with the Bascuence or the Cantabrian tongue in Biscare, and amongst the Pyrenean mountaines The Armorican tongue, which they of low Brittaine speake (for there is your Bas-Breton, and the Breton-Brittonant or Breton Gallois, who speakes French) is a dialect of the old Brittish as the word Armorica imports, which is a meere Welsh word, for if one observe the Radicall words in that Language they are the same that are now spoken in Wales, though they differ much in the composition of their fentences, as doth the Cornish Now some of the approvedst Antiquaries positively hold the Originall Language of the Celtæ, the true ancient Gaules, to be Wellh And amongst other Authors they produce no meaner than Cafar and Tacitus, to confirme this opinion For Cafar faith that the Druvdes of Gaule understood the Britts/h Druyds, who it seemes were of more account for then Philosophy, because as he faith, the Gaules came usually over to be taught by them. which must bee by conference, for there were few books then · Besides Tacitus in the life of Julius Agricola reporteth, that the Language of the Brittaines and the Gaules little differed, I restraine my selfe to the middle part of France called Gallia Celtica, for they of Aquitaine spake a language that corresponded with the old Spanish, they of Burgundy and Champagny with the German, and most part of Provence spake Greek, there having beene a famous Colony of Grecians planted in Other fmall differences there are up and Marfeilles down in other Provinces of France, as the low Norman useth to contract many words, as he will often fav. Y'ay un pet à faire, for J'ay un petit affaire, and the Poictevin will mince the word, and fay, ma Mefe, mon pefe, for ma Mere, mon Pere; but these differences are not con fiderable

The Spansh or Castilian tongue, which is usually called Romance, and of late years Lengua Christiana, (but it is called so only amongst themselves) for a Spaniard will commonly aske a stranger whether hee can speake Christian, that is, Castilian? The Spanish (I say) hath but one considerable dialect, which is the Portugues, which [this] the Fewes of Europe speake more than any other language, and [because] they hold that the Messas shall come out that Tribe, that [which] speake the Portugal language; other small differences there are in the pronunciation of the gutturall letters in the Castillian, but they are of small moment. They of the Kingdome of Valencia and Cataluma (Goth-land) speake rather a language mixed of French, and Italian In the Mountaines of Granada (the Alpuxarras) they speake Moriso, that last part of Spaine that was inhabited by the Moores, who had possessed it above 700 yearss.

But the most ancient speech of Spaine seemes to have beene the Bascuence or the Cantabrian tongue spoken in Guipufcoa, the Asturias and in some places amongst the Pyrenes, but principally in the Province of Bifcaye, which was never conquered by Roman, Cartaginian, Goth, Vandall or Moore, which Nations overrunne all the rest of Spaine, (though some more, some lesse) therefore whenfoever the King of Spaine commeth to any of the territories of Biscaye, hee must pull off his shooes upon the frontiers, when he treads the first step, being as it were Virgin holy ground And as it is probable that the Bascuence is the primitive language of Spaine, so doubtleffe the people of that Countrey are a remnant of the very Aborigenes, of her first Inhabitants is an infallible Rule, that if you defire to find out (the Indigenæ) the ancientest people or language of a Countrey. you must go amongst the Mountaines and places of fastnesse, as the Epirotiques in Greece, the Heylanders in Scotland, the Brittaines in Wales, with whom (I meane the last) the Biscayner doth much symbolize in many things, as in the polition and quality of ground, in his candor and humanity towards Strangers more than any other people of Spaine, [together with] his cryed up Antiquity; for the Spanards confesse the ancientest race of Gentry to have been preferred there. So that a Biscarner is capable to be a Cavalier of any of the three habits without any ferutiny to be made by the Office, whether he be, Impro de la fangre de los Moros, that is, cleare of the bloud of the Moores or no, 'tis enough that he be a Montanero, that he be borne amongst the Mountaines of Bifcave. And many may be the reasons why Hilly people keep then standings so well, for being inured to labour, and subject to the inclemency of the Heavens, distemperatures of Ayre, to short Commons, and other incommodities, they prove the hardier and abler men, and happily with the elevation of the ground their spirits are heightned, and so prove more couragious and forward to repel an invading enemy

Adde hereunto, that the cragginesse and steepinesse of places up and down is a great advantage to the dwellers, and makes them inaccessible, for they serve as Fortresses erested by Nature her selfe, to protest them from all incursions as Casar complaines of some places in Scythia, that Difficilius erat hostem invenire, quam vin-

cere

And now for further proofe that the Cantabrian language is the ancientest of Spaine, I thinke it will not be much from the purpose, if I insert here a strange discovery that was made not much above halfe a hundred yeares ago, about the very midle of Spaine, of the Pattuecos, a people that were never knowne upon the face of the Earth before, though Spaine hath been a renown'd famous Countrey visited and known by many warlik Nations. They were discovered by the flight of a Faulcon, for the Duke of Alva hauking on a time neere certaine hils, not farre from Salamanca, one of his Hauks which he much valued, flew over those Mountaines, and his men not being able to find her at first, they were sent back by the Duke after her; these Faulkners clammering up and down, from hill to hill and luring all along, they lighted at last upon a large pleafant Valley, where they spied a company of naked Savage people, locked in between an affembly of huge crags and hils indented and hemmed in (as it were) one in another As simple and Savage they were, as the rudest people of any of the two Indies, wheref fome thought a man on horfeback to be one creature with the horfe These Savages gazing awhile upon them, flew away at last into their caves, for they were Troglodites, and had no dwelling but in the hollowes of the rocks:

The Faulconers observing well the track of the passage. returned the next day, and told the Duke, that in lieu of a hauke, they had found out a New World, a New People never knowne on the continent of Spaine, fince Tubal Cain came first thither A while after, the Duke of Alva went himselfe with a Company of Muscateers, and Conquered them, for they had no offensive weapon but flings, they were Pythagoreans, and did eat nothing that had life in it, but excellent fruits, rootes and fprings there were amongst them, they worshipped the Sun, and new Moone, their language was not intelligible by any, yet many of their fimple words were pure Bascuence, and their gutturall pronunciation the very same, and a gutturall pronunciation is an infallible badge of an ancient language, And fo they were reduced to Christianity, but are to this day discernable from other Spaniards by their more tawny complexions, which proceeds from the reverberation of the Sun-beams glancing upon those stony mountaines wherewith they are encircled, and on fome fides trebly fenced, which beames reflects upon them with a greater strength and fo tannes them

But I did not think to have ftayed so long in Spain now, nor indeed the last time I was there, but he that hath to deale with that Nation, must have good store of Phlegme and patience, and both for his stay, and successe of businesse, may often reckon without his host upon the businesse went about, and for any one to prescribe a precise time to conclude any businesse there, is to reckon without ones host!

SECTION XI

Vt these varieties of Dialetts in France and Spaine, are faire lesse in number to those of Italy; Nor do I believe were there ever so many amongst the Greeks, though their Countrey was indented and cut out into so many Islands, which as they differed in position of place, to there was some reason they should differ something in propriety of Speech. There is in Italy the Toscan, the Roman, the Venetian, the Neapolitan, the Calabrese, the Genovese, the Luquesse, the Milanese, the Parmasan, the Piemontese, and others in and about Abouzzo, and the Apennine his, and all these have severall Dialects and Idiomes of Speech, and the reason I conceive to be, is the multiplicity of Governments, there being in Italy, one Kingdome, three Republiques, and five or six absolute Principalities, besides the Popedome, and their Lawes, [the Lawes of all these] being different, their Language also groweth to be so but the prime Italian dialect, take Accent and Elegance together, is Lingua Toscana in boca Romana. The Toscan tongue in a Roman mouth

There is also a Mongrell Dialect composed of Italian and French, and some Spanish words are also in it, which they call Franco, that is used in many of the Islands of the Ægean Sea, and reacheth as farre as Constantinople, and Natolie, and some places in Afrique, and it is the ordinary speech of Commerce 'twixt Christians, Fewes, Turkes, and Greeks in the Levant.

Now for the Originall Language in Italy, as the Mefapian and Hetrufcan tongue, there is not a fyllable left any where, nor do I know any Countrey where the old primitive Languages, are fo utterly and totally extinguished without the least trace left behind, as in Italy.

Touching the Latine Tongue, which is one of the ancientest Languages of Italy, but not so ancient as those I spake of before, the received opinion is, that the mundation of the Goths, Vandals and Longbards, were her first Corrupters but it is not so, as the Learned Bembo, and our no lesse Learned Brerewood are of opinion, for as the Latine Tongue grew to persection by certaine degrees, and in Casar and Cicero's times (whereof the one for purity, the other for copions free, were the best that ever with the came to the highest flourish together with the Empire, so had shee insensible degrees of corruption amongst the vulgar, and intrin fique changes in her felfe before any forrain cause concurred, for the Salian Verses, towards the end of the Republique, were scarce intelligible, no more were the capitulations of Peace 'twixt', Rome and Carthage in Polybius his time. And every one knowes what kind of Latine stands upon record on the Columna Rostrata in the Capitoll, in memory of the samous Navall victory of Duillius the Consull, which happened but 150 yeares before Cicero. As also what Latine had the vogue in Plautus his time. And here it will not be much out of the byas, to insert (in this Ogdoassalque) a few verses of the Latine which was spoken in that age, which were given me by a worthy polite Gentleman,

Sic eft, nam nenum lacient uls manaca, præs eft
Andreas, Ipfus Hortitor ergo cluo Dividiam eftricem ut genni averruncet, et ultra Calpar, si pote, Luræ insipet omnimodis, Calpar, quod Nymphis nenum ebrium, at Argeliorum
Žitho, quod nostra hæc vincia dapsiliter

Degulet, ha frux obgræcarı (haut numına pofænt) Prodinit. topper morta modo orta necat

So that as before, so after Cicero's time, the Latine Tongue wrought certaine changes in her selfe, before any mixture with Strangers, or the intervention of any forraine cause For as Kingdomes and States with all other Sublunary things are fubject to a tofsing and tumbling, to periods and changes, as also all Naturall bodies corrupt inwardly and infensibly of themselves, so Languages are not exempt from this Fate, from those accidents, and revolutions that attend Time For Horace complained in his dayes, that words changed as coynes did: Vet be fides this home bredd change, it cannot be denyed but the Latine Tongue, had some forraine extrinsique cause to degenerate fo farre into Italian, as the admission of fuch multiplicities of Strangers to be Roman Citizens, with the great number of flaves that were brought into the Caty: Adde herunto at last those swarms of barbarous Nations, which in leffe than one hundred yeares thrice over-ran Italy, and tooke fuch footing in her:

And as in Italy, fo likewise in Spaine and France, they corrupted the Latine tongue, though I believe she never tooke any perfect impression amongst the vulgar in those Countreyes, albeit the Romaines laboured to plant her there, making it their practise (though not at first for we reade of some People that petitioned unto them, that they might bee permitted to use the Latine tongue) with the Law to bring in their Language as a marke of Conquest

But one may justly aske why the Latine tongue could receive no growth at all amongst the Britaines, who were fo many hundred years under the Roman government, and fome of the Emperours living and dying amongst them? To this it may bee answered, that in Brittaine wee reade of no more than foure colonies that were ever planted, but in Spaine there were 29, and But as I cannot cease to wonder that in France 26 the Romans notwithstanding those Colonies and Legions that had fo long cohabitation, and coalition with them. could take no impression at all upon the Brittaines in fo long a tract of time in point of Speech, (notwithflanding that in some other things there be some resemblances observed 'twixt the people, as I said before) I wonder as much how fuch a multitude of Greeke words could creep into the Welsh language, some whereof for example fake, I have couched in this Distingue

> Α'λς ύδωρ, γένεσις, πῦρ, κοιλία γραῖα διδὰσκω Δαῖρα, μελὶ, κλύω, ήλιος, αῖσα, μέθυι & c

Which words Englished are, Salt, water, birth, fire, the belly, an old woman, to teach, the earth, hony, to heare, the Sun, destiny, drunkard.

Belides divers others, which are both Greeke and Wellh, both in pronunciation and fense.

Now for the Greek tongue, there is no question, but it was of larger extent than ever the Roman was, for these three respects, for the mighty commerce that Nation did exercise, for their humour in planting of Colonies, for their Learning and Philosophy, for Greek is the faintificalst tongue that ever was, in all which they went bevond the Romanes And it is not long ago fince in fome places of Italy her felfe, as Calabria and Apulia, the Liturey was in the Greek tongue Nor is some vulgai Greek so farre adulterated, and eloignated from the true Greek, as Itahan is from the Latin, for there is yet in some places of the Morea true Greek spoken vulgarly (you cannot fay fo of the Latin any where) only they confound these three letters, n, i, v, (Eta, Iota, Upfilon) and these two dipthongs si and oi, all which they pronounce as Ioata As for mive on zupis, they pronounce πίνω σὶ κίριε for μήνιν ἀειδε θεά, they fay μίνιν αἰδε There is also true Greek spoken in some parts of the leffer Afia, where there is no place upon the furface of the earth, for the proportion, where fo many differing Languages are spoken, yet most of them are but Dialects and fubdialects, so that of those two and twenty tongues, which Mithridates is recorded to have vnderstood, above two parts of three, I beleeve were but dealects.

I dare go no further Eastward, for it is beyond the bounds of so small a Volume as this, to speak of the Levantine tongues, that go from the Liver to the Heart, from the Right hand to the Left, as the most Spacious Arabique, which is spoken (or learnt) throughout al[1] the vast dominions of the Mahumetan Empire, and is the most fixed language now upon Earth, it being death to alter it, or Translate the Alcoran into any other language, to adde the least title to the first text, or comment upon it, a rare policy to prevent schifmes, and restraine the extravagant, and various resilesse fances of humane braine

This page is also too narrow to comprehend any thing of the most large Slavonque tongue, which above other Languages hath this prerogative to have two Characters, one resembling the Latine, the other the Greek, and in many places the Liturgy is in both, one for Sundayes and Holy-dayes, the other for working dayes There are above forty feverall Nations, both in Europe and Afia, which have the Slavonick for their vulgar speech, it reacheth from Mosco, the Court of the great Knez, to the Turks Seraglio in Constantinople, and so over the Propontey to divers places in Asia, it being the common language of the Fanzaries.

SECT XII.

He German or Teutonique tongue also is of mighty extent, for not only the large Continent of Germany high and low, but the Kingdomes of England, Scotland, Denmarque, Swethland, Norway, Island, and fome parts of Hungary and Poland speake it vulgarly And questionlesse the German is one of the first mother tongues of Europe, whereof Scaliger would have but eleven, though there be foure or five more, but I find that they who are cryed up for great Clearks may erre, as he did in this, as also when hee made Prester John an African and placed him in Ethiopia, in the Habassins Countrey, whereas it is certaine that he was an Asian, and King of Tenduc in Tartary above two thousand miles distant, besides he was a Nestorian by his religion, and it is well known the Habassines are Jacobies and Christians from the girdle upward, and Jews downward, admitting both of Baptism and Circumcision

And so ancient is the German tongue, that Goropius Becanus slattered himselse with a fancy, that it was the language which was spoken in Paradise, which Ortelius also shewed a desire to believe, they grounded this conceipt upon these words, Adam, Eve, Abel, Seth, etc which they would stretch to bee German words, also that their language came first from Asia, because Godt, Fader, Moder, Broder, Star, are found to signifie the same things both in the German, and Persian tongue.

There is no language fo ful of Monofyllables and knotted fo with Confonants as the German, howfoever fhe is a full mouthd mafculine fpeech. the fpeeches of the Kingdoms before mentioned, are but Dialetts derived from her, And the English is but a Sub-dialett or branch of the Saxon Dialett, which hath no other name in Welsh and Irish to this day, for take an Englishman Capa pea, from head to foot, every member hee hath is Dutch

Yet fince the last Conquest much French hath got in, and greatly embellished and smoothed the English, so that there is very much affinity between them, as for Example,

La Fortune me tourmente, La Vertu mecontente

Or,

Mon desir est insiny, D'entrer en Paradis

Which fayings are both French and English

Of late yeares the English tongue hath much enriched her felfe, by borrowing of fome choyce, well founding and fignificant words from other Languages also; so that she may be compared to a Posie made up of many fragrant choyce Flowers: And truly, without interest and passion, let it be spoken, there is in English as true straines of Eloquence, as strong and sinewy Expressions, as elaborate and folid pieces of Fancy, as far fetched reaches of Invention, and as full of falt, [there are] Metaphor's as faithfully pourfued, Similies as aptly applyed, and as well cloathed and girded about, as in any Language whatfoever, both in Poesie and Prose, It must be granted that some other Languages, for their soft and smooth melting fluency, as having no abruptnesse of Confonants, have some advantage of the English, yet many of their fancies, which amongst themselves they hold to be strong lines and quinteffential stuffe, being turned to another tongue become flat, and prove oftentimes but meere gingles, but what is witty in English, is fo, with advantage, in any Language elfe, unleffe the concerpt be topicall, or perfonall, and peculiar only to this Island

But whither have I been thus transported? The Copiousnesse and pleasure of the Argument hath carried

mee a little further than I made account, for to bee a πελύγλωσις to have the knowledge, specially the practicall knowledge (for the Theory is not nere so grateful nor useful) of many languages is one of the richest and pleasingst kind of Notions that is, And we find upon the best record, that the first blessing which fell down from Heaven upon those holy Heralds of Christianity, the Apostles, was the knowledge of many tongues, inspired into them immediatly by God Almighty himselfe

For what is Imagination, Invention and Senfe, without the faculty of Speech, without expression? Speech is the instrument by which a Foole is distinguished from a Philosopher Speech is the Index, the Interpreter, the Ambassador of the mind, and the Tongue the Vehiculum, the Chariot, which conveyeth and carrieth the notions of the Mind to Reasons Palace, and [ fo to ] the impregnable Tower of Truth And although there be but one way thither, yet there be many forts of Chariots, some more sumptious and better harnessed than others, for among st tongues there be some farre more rich, more copous, and of stronger expressions than others. And amongst Tongues there is also a kind of good sellowship, for they sometimes supply one anothers wants, and mutually borrow and lend

SECT. XIII.

Vt whether have I wandred? I had almost forgot where I left my Traveller, but now I remember wel it was in Italy. And having furveyed Italy, that minion of Nature, he may crosse the Alpes, and see some of the Cantons, those rugged Republiques, and [with their] Regiments, and then passe through many of the Stately proud Cities of Germany, till hee comes to Bruxels, and there he shall behold the face of a constant Military Court, and Provinciall Government, with a missellary of all Nations, and if there be any Leagers a soot, or Armies in motion, it should bee time well spent to see them

For the Netherlands have been for many yeares, as one may fay, the very Cockpit of Christendome, the Schoole of Armes, and Rendezvous of all adventurous Spirits, and Cadets, which makes most Nations of Europe beholden to them for Soldiers Therefore the History of the Belgique wars are very worth the reading, for I know none fuller of stratagemes, of reaches of Pollicy, of variety of fuccesses in so short a time nor in which more Princes have been engaged (though some more, some lesse) for reasons of state, nor a warre which hath produced such deplorable effects directly or collaterally, all Christendome over, both by Sea and Land

Fean Petit in French is an approved Author, Guicardin, Don Carles Coloma in Spanish, and Sir Roger Williams in English, with others, there you shall reade of one Towne taken by a Boat of Turfs, and reprized many yeares after by a Boat of Fagots, another taken by the flight of a Hauk, another by a load of Hey, another by a Cart full of Apples, and many by disguises.

either of Boores, Fryers, or Marchands.

Having spent some small time in Brabant and Flanders, he may by safe conduct, as is usuall, passe to Holland, where he shall sind a People planted as it were under the Sea, out of whose jawes they force an habitation, with infinite expence and toyle, checking the impetuous cours of the angry Ocean, and shewing the World how far Industry and Art, can curbe and controule Nature And very expedient it is, hee should take an exact Survey of the States of the United Provinces, because they are accounted the furest Confederates of England, and her fastes Friends, for interest of Religion, for community of danger, and consequently of reciprocall preservation

And it will be a wonderfull thing to fee what a mighty fubliftence of wealth and a huge Navigable power that State is come too, by a rare unparallelled industry. For I dare avouch that the Roman Commonwealth, (though she had her head as well knit in her infancy as any that ever was) did not come neere her.

in so short a progresse of time, to such a growth of ftrength

But it feemes all things confpired to rayfe Holland to this passe First, the humour of the people, being patient and industrious, and of a genius more inclinable to a Democraticall Government than to a Monarchy. Adde hereunto the quality of the Countrey, being every where half cut, and as it were inlayed with water, and thereby much fortified, and made in many places inaccessible, so that, if need were, Holland could turne her selfe into a huge pond when she list

Hereunto concurred a further advantage of fituation, having behind her the Baltique Sea, which affoords her all kind of Materials for fhipping, and for all kind of Nutriment and Military forces England and France, both fwarming with fuperfluous people, fufpectfull of the Spanish greatnesse, and so not unwilling to contribute auxiliary strength for mutuall security and confer-

vation

Navigation and Mercantile Negotiation, are the two Poles whereon that State doth move, and to both these, it seems, Nature her selfe hath expressly designed both Countrey and People, Them by an extraordinary kind of Propensity, the Countrey by apt position, for having no Land to manure [it], they plow the very bowels of the Deep, the wrinkled fore-head of Neptune being the furrowes that yealds them encrease.

Moreover, there being many great Rivers that flice and cut the Countrey up and down to difgorge themfelvs into the Ocean, those Rivers may be faid to pay them tribute, as well as to the Sea, which Rivers branching themselves into large and bearing streames, do so fitly serve one another, and all the whole, that it may bee said, Nature in the frame of humane bodies, did not discover more Art, in distributing the veines and arteries, for the easy conveyance of the masse of bloud into each part, as she hath shewed here in dispersing those waters so orderly for trassque.

These Rivers bring her what the large continent of Germany, and other Easterne Countreys affoord, and shee lying between them and the Sea, furnisheth them with all far fetched Indian, African, and Spanish commodities

Here you shall see the most industrious people upon earth, making a rare vertue of necessity, for the same thing which makes a Parrot speake, makes them to labour. For having nothing of their own, yet they abound with all things, and may be said, to live by the idlenesse of some of their neighbours, I am loth to name here who they are

Here you shall find a people grow Rich also by that which useth to impoverish others, even by Warre, for prises and booties abroad, go to make a good part of their wealth

Yet in conversation they are but heavy, of a homely outside, and slow in action, which flownesse carieth with it a notable perseverance, and this may bee imputed to the quality of that mould of earth, whereon they dwell, which may be said to bee a kind of standing poole of Ayre. And which is known to have such a force of assimilation, that when people of a more vivacious temper, come to mingle with them, at the second generation, they seeme to participate of the soyle and Ayre, and degenerate into meere Hollanders, the like is found dayly in Horses and Dogs, and all other animals

Occulta est Batavæ quædam vis insita terræ.

One remarquable piece of Policy I forgot, that hee should observe in the Vnited Provinces, viz Why in so similar an extent of ground they have so many rich, welbuilt and populous Townes amongst them, one of the principall reasons is, because they appropriate some staple materiall commoditie to every one of the great Townes, as Amsterdam hath the trade of the East and West Indies, Roterdam the English Cloth, Dort the Rhenish Wines, Middelborough the French Wines, Treveres the Scots trade, the Hage the residence of the Prince and the States, Haerlam subsists by knitting and dying, and so forth; which is a very laudable cours, not to suffer one place to swallow the wealth and traffique of the whole, like the fpleene in the naturall body, whose fwelling makes all the rest of the members languish.

SECT. XIV.

Aving thus passed the diameter of France, run over Spaine, crossed the Mediterranean to Italy, and observed the multiplicity of Governments therein, having thus climbed the Alpes, and traversed the best part of Germany, having also taken the length of the Belgique Lion, (of all which France for a Kingdome, Venice for a Republique, Millan for a Duchy, Flanders for a County beare the bell) having I fay, Travelled through all these places, all which may bee done compleatly in three yeares and foure months, which foure Months I allow for itinerary removals and journeys. and the Yeares for residence in places, it will be high time now to hoyfe fayle, and fleere homwards, where being returned, hee must abhorre all affectations, all forced postures and complements For Forraine Travell oftentimes makes many to wander from themselves, as well as from their Countrey, and to come back mere Miniques, and fo in going farre, to fare worle, and bring back leffe wit, than they carreth forth, they go out Figures (according to the Italian Proverb) and returne Cyphers, they retaine the Vice of a Countrey, and will discours learnedly thereon, but passe by, and forget the good, their Memories being herein like haire feeves, that keep up the branne, and let go the fine flowre They strive to degenerate as much as they can from Englishmen, and all their talke is full Forraine, or at least, will bring it to be fo, though it be by head and shoulders, magnifying other Nations, and derogating from their own: Nor can one hardly exchange three words with them, at an Ordinary (or elfe-where) but prefently they are th'other fide of the Sea, commending either the Wines of France, the fruits of Italy, or the Oyle and Sallets of Spaine.

Some also there are who by their Countenance more than by their Carrage, by their Discases, more than by their Discourses, discover themselves to have been Abroad under hot Climats.

Others have a custome to bee always relating strange things and wonders, (of the humor of Sir John Mandevile) and they usually present them to the Hearers, through multiplying glasses, and thereby cause the thing to appeare far greater than it is in it self, they make Mountaines of Mole-hils, like Charenton-Bridge-Eccho, which doubles the found nine times. Such a Traveller was he, that reported the Indian Fly, to be as big as a Fox, China birds, to be as big as some Horses, and their Mice to be as big as Monkeys, but they have the wit to setch this far enough off, because the Hearer may rather believe it, than make a voyage so far to disprove it

Every one knowes the Tale of him, who reported hee had feen a Cabbage under whose leases a Regiment of Souldiers were sheltred from a shower of raine: Another who was no Traveller (yet the wiser man) said, hee had passed by a place where there were 400 brassers making of a Cauldron, 200 within, and 200 without, beating the nayles in, the Traveller asking for what use that huge Cauldron was? he told him, Sir it was to

boyle your Cabbage

Such another was the Spansh Traveller, who was so habituated to hyperbolize, and relate wonders, that he became ridiculous in also companies, so that he was forced at last to give order to his man, when he sell into any excesse this way, and report any thing improbable, he should pul him by the sleeve. The Master falling into his wonted hyperboles, spoke of a Church in China, that was ten thousand yards long, his man standing behind and pulling him by the sleeve, made him stop suddenly the company asking, I pray Sir, how broad might that Church be? he replyed, but a yard broad, and you may thanke my man for pulling me by the sleeve, else I had made it four square for you.

Others have another kind of hyperbolizing vaine, as they will fay, there's not a woman in Italy, but weares an Iron girdle next her skin in the absence of her husband. that for a pistoll one may be master of any mans life there, That there is not a Gentleman in France but hath his box of playsters about him, That in Germany every one hath a roufe in his pate, once a day; That there are [a] few Dons in Spaine that eat flesh once a week, or that hath not a Mistresse besides his wife; That Paris hath more Courtizans than London honest Women (which may admit a double fense;) That Sevill is like a cheffebord table, having as many Morifcos as Spaniards, That Venuce hath more Maquerelles, than Marchands, Portugall more Fews than Christians whereas it is farre otherwise, for the Devill is not so black as he is painted, no more are these Noble Nations and Townes as they are tainted. Therefore one should

Parcere paucorum diffundere crimen in omnes
And it is a generous kind of civility to report alwayes
the best

Furthermore, there is amongst many others (which were too long to recite here) an odde kind of Anglicifme, wherein some do frequently expresse themselves, as to say Your Boores of Holland, Sir, Your Iesuites of Spaine, Sir; Your Courtisans of Venice, Sir whereunto one answered (not impertinently) My Courtisans Sir? Pox on them all for me, they are none of my Courtisans

Lastly, some kind of Travellers there are, whom their gate and strouting, their bending in the hammes, and shoulders, and looking upon their legs, with frisking

and finging do speake them Travellers

Others by a phantastique kind of ribanding themfelvs, by their modes of habit, and cloathing (and touching variety of cloathing, there be certaine odde ill-favoured old Prophecies of this Ifland, which were improper to recite here) do make themselves knowne to have breathed fortaine ayre, like Sir Thomas Moord's Traveller, whom I will bring here upon the stage. Amicus et Sodalis est Lalus mihi, Britanniaque natus, altufque Infulà At cum Brittannos Galliæ cultoribus Oceanus ingens, lingua, mores dirimant, Spernit tamen Lalus Britannica omnia; Miratur expetitaue cuncta Gallica Togà fuperbit ambulans in Gallica, Amaique multûm Gallicas lacernulas, Zonâ, locello, atque enfe gaudet Gallico, Et calcers et fubligare Gallico, Totoque denique apparatu Gallico, Nam et unum habet Ministrum, eumque Gallicum, Sed quem, licet velit, nec ipfa Gallia, Tractare quiret plus (opinor) Gallice, Stipendir nihil dat, atque id Gallice, Vestitque tritis pannulis, et Gallice hoc, Alit cibo parvo et malo, idque Gallice, Labore multo exercet, atque hoc Gallice, Pugnifque crebro pulfat, idque Gallice, In cætu, ın vıa, et ın foro, et frequentià Rixatur objurgatque semper Gallice Ouid? Gallice illud? imb femi-Gallice, Sermonem enim, ni fallor, ille Gallicum, Tam callet omnem, quàm Latınum Pfittacus Crescit tamen, sibique nimirum placet, Verbis tribus fi quid loquatur Gallicis. Aut Gallicis si quid neguit vocabulis, Conatur id verbis, licet non Gallicis, Sono faltem personare Gallico, Palato hiante, acutulo quodam tono, Et fæminæ instar garrientis molliter, Sed ore pleno, tanquam id impleant fabæ, Balbutiens videlicet fuaviter. Pressis quibusdam literis, Galli quibus Ineptrentes abstrnent, nihil secus Quam vulpe gallus, rupibufque Navita; Sic ergo linguam ille et Latinam Gallice, Et Gallice linguam fonat Britannicam, Et Gallice linguam refert Hispanicam,

Et Gallick linguam refert Lombardicam,
Et Gallick linguam refert Germanicam,
Et Gallick omnem præter unam Gallicam,
Nam Gallicam foliùm fonat Britannick
At quifquis Infulâ fatus Britannica
Sic patriam infolens fashidiet fuam,
Ut more simiæ laboret singere,
Et æmulari Gallicas ineptias,
Ex amne Gallo ego hunc opinor ebrium.
Ergo ut ex Britanno Gallus esse nittur, Sic Du jubete, siat siat ex Gallo capus.

SEC. XV

Vt fuch Travellers as these may bee termed Land-lopers, as the Dutchman saith, rather than Travellers, Such may be said to go out upon such an [the like] Arrand, as wee reade Saules-son went once out upon [to feek his Father's affes], or like the Producill fon, to feed upon the huskes of strange Countreys, or as we reade, Æsope travelled to Istria, thence to Africk, and fundry other Regions, only to find out the best Crabs, or like him who came from the furthest parts of Hungary to England [from the furthest parts of Hungary], to eat Oysters These Travellers in lieu of the Ore of Ophir wherewith they should come home richly freighted, may be said to make their returne in Apes and Owles, in a cargazon of Complements and Cringes, or some huge monstrous Periwigs, which is the Golden Fleece they bring over with them.

Such, I fay, are a shame to their Countrey abroad, and their kinned at home, and to their parents, Benonies, the fons of forrow and as Fonas in the Whales belly, travelled much, but faw little, why, because hee was shut up in the body of that great (aquatique) beast, so these may be faid to have been carried up and downe through many Countreys, and after a long pererration to and fro, to returne as wise as they went, because their soules were so ill lodged, and shut up in fuch stupid bodies. No, an ingenious and discerning Traveller will disdaine this, and strive to distinguish 'twixt good and evill, 'twixt that which is gracefull, and what's phantastique, 'twixt what is to be followed, and what's to be shunned, and bring home the best. Hee will strive to be rather Substance without shew, than shew without substance. From the Italian he will borrow his reservednesse, not his seasons and humor of revenge, From the French his Horsemanship and gallantnesse that way, with his Considence, and nothing else From the Spaniard his Sobriety, not his lust From the German (cleane contrary) his Continency, not his Excesse, the other way: From the Netherland his Industry, and that's all: His heart must still remaine English, though I allow him some choyce and change of Habit,

Cælum, non anımum mutet-

And as the commendablest quality of Oyle is to smell of nothing, yet it giveth an excellent relish to many forts of meats: So he is the discreetest Traveller, who Savoureth of no affectation, or strangenesse, of no exotique modes at all, after his returne, either in his Carrage or Discours, unlesse the subject require it, and the occasion and Company aptly serve for him, to discover himselfe, and then an application of his Knowledge abroad, will excellently season his matter and serve as golden discover it in.

If any Forsaner be to be imitated in his manner of Discours and Comportement, it is the Italian, who may be faid to be a medium 'twixt the Gravity of the Spaniard, the Heavinesse of the Dutch, and Levity of our next Neighbours, for he seemes to allay the one, and quicken the other two, to serve as a buoy to the one, and a ballast to th'other

France wieth to work one good effect upon the English, she wieth to take away the mothers milk (as they say,) that blush and bashfull tincture, which wieth to rise up in the face upon sudden salutes, and enterchange of Complement, and to enhanden one with considence; For the Gentry of France have a kind of loose becomming boldnes, and forward vivacity in their cariage, whereby [as] they seeme to draw respect from their Superiours and Equals, and [so they] make their Inseriours [and all kind of mechaniques to] keepe a fitting distance

In Italy amongst other morall cautions, one may learne not to be over produgall of speech when there is no need, for with a nod, with a shake of the head, and shrug of the shoulder, they will answer to many questions

One shall learne besides there not to interrupt one in the relation of his tale, or to feed it with odde interlocutions. One shall learne also not to laugh at his own jest, as too many use to do, like a Hen, which can not lay an egge but she must cackle

Moreover, one shall learne not to ride so furrously as they do ordinarily in England, when there is no necessity at all for it [required], for the Itahans have a Proverb, that a galloping horse is an open sepulcher And the English generally are observed by all other Nations, to ride commonly with that speed, as if they rid for a Midwise, or a Physitian, or to get a pardon to save one's life as he goeth to execution, when there is no such thing, or any other occasion at all, which makes them call England, the Hell of Horses [not without cause]

In these hot Countreyes also, one shall learne to give over the habit of an odde custome, peculiar to the English alone, and whereby they are distinguished from other Nations, which is, To make still towards the Chimney, though it bee in the Dog-dayes.

SECT XVI

Anguage is the greatest outward testimony of Travell · Yet is it a vaine and verball Knowledge that rests only in the Tongue; Nor are the observations of the Eye any thing prositable, unlesse the Mind draw fomething from the Externe object to enrich the Soule withall, to informe to build up and unbeguile the Inward man, that by the fight of fo various objects of Art and Nature, that by the perlustration of fuch famous Cities, Castles, Amphitheaters, and Palaces, some glorious and new, fome mouldred away, and eaten by the Iron-teeth of Time, he come to discerne, the best of all earthly things to bee but frayle and transitory That this World at the best is but a huge Inne, and we but wayfaring men, but Pilgrimes, and a company of rambling Paffengers That we enter first into this World by Travaile, and fo paffe along with Cries, by weeping croffe to mile end that it was no improper Character the Wifest of Kings gave of this life to be nought elfe but a continuall Travell as the Author croffing once over the Pyrenes, writ to a Noble friend of his in this diffigue.

Vita Peregrinans Iter est, facra pagina monstrat, Nunc verè vitam, nam peregrinor, ago

Yet amongst these passengers, some find warme loagings in this Inne, with soft beds, the table plentifully furnished, And such is the poorenesse of some Spirits, and the narrownesse of their Soules, and they are so nailed to the Earth, that when they are almost at their Fourneyes end, when they lye wind-bound at the Cape of good Hope, and have one foot in the Barge ready to go off, with the next Gale to another Countrey, to their last home. Yet, as the Orator saith, Quò minus viæ restated plus viatici quærunt, the lesse way remaines, the more provision they make still for their journey.

Other Paffengers there are, which find but short commons, they are forced to trudge up and down for a roome to lay their heads upon, and would bee well content with a trucklebed, or a mattreffe in the garret, for want whereof, they are often constrained [put] to lye in state [abroad] against their wils in the Staire Chamber, [but much against their wils] having [though they have] the Heaven for their Canopy, and the breasts of their Common Mother for their pillow

And it is the high pleafure of Providence this disparity should be 'twist the Citizens of this World, and that the earth should be divided into fuch unequall portions, to leave place for Industry, Labour, and Wit, the Children of Necessity, and Parents of Vertue, for otherwise, sew or none would pourchase any ground upon Parnassus Hill

To fee the Escuriall in Spaine, or the Plate-Fleet at her first arrivall, To see Saint Denis, the late Cardinal-Palace in Richelieu, and other things in France. To fee the Citadell of Antwerp, The New Towne of Amsterdam, and the Forrest of Masts, which lye perpetually before her. To fee the Imperiall, and stately Hans Towns of Germany, To fee the Treasurie of Saint Mark, and Arfenall of Venice, The Mount of Prety in Naples, The Dome and Castle of Milan, The proud Palaces in and about Genoua, whereof there are two hundred within two miles of the Towne, and not one of the same forme of building, To see Saint Peter's Church, the Vatican, and other magnificent structures in Rome, who in the case she stands in, may be faid to be but her owne Tombe, in comparison of what the hath beene, being fallen from the  $\tilde{H}ils$  to the Plaines

To be able to fp[e]ake many Languages, as the Voluble French, the Courtly Italian, the Lofty Spamsh, the Lusty Dutch, the Powerfull Latine, the Scientifique and happily compounding Greek, the most Spacious Slavomove, the Mysticall Hebrew with all her Dialects All this is but vanity and superficiall Knowledge, unlesse the inward man be bettered hereby, unleffe by feeing and perusing the volume of the Great World, one learne to know the Little, which is himfelfe, unles one learne to governe and check the passions, our Domestique Enemies, then which nothing can conduce more to gentlenes of mind, to Elegancy of Manners, and Solid Wisdome. But principally, unleffe by furveying and admiring his works abroad, one improve himself in the knowledge of his Creator, præ quo quifquiliæ cætera in comparison whereof the best of fublunary blefsings are but bables, and this indeed, this Vnum neceffarium, should be the center to which Travell should tend

Moreover, one should evertuate himselfe to bring something home, that may accrue to the publique benefit and advantage of his Countrey, and not to draw water to his own Mill only, For of those three that the Orator saith, challenge a share in our Nativity, our Countrey is the first, and our felfs last. Therefore, he should pry into the Policy and municipall Lawes of other States and Cities, and be able to render an accompt of their government, and by collation thereof with that of his own, Examine well whether any wholesome constitution or custome may be applyable to the frame of his owne Countrey.

It is recorded in an ancient Greek Author, that the famous Ptolomey, he who conversed and Travelled so much amongst Heavenly bodies, culled out a select number of his pregnantest young Nobles, and Gentlemen to go to Greece, Italy, Carthage, and other Regions, and the prime Instruction they had in charge, was, to observe the Government, as they Travelled along, and bring back three of the wholesomest Lawes out of every Countrey Being returned, they related that in the Roman Republique, a most singular veneration was had of the Temples, a punituall obedience to Governors, and unavoydable punishments institled upon malesactors

In Carthage, the Senat commanded, the Nobles executed, and the People obeyed

In Athens the Rich were not fuffered to be Extortioners, the Poore idle, nor the Magistrates ignorant.

In Rhodes Old men were Venerable, Young men

modest, and Women folitary and filent

In Thebes the Nobles and fight, the Plebenans labour, and Philosophers teach.

In Sicily Justice was entirely administred, Commerce was honestly exercised, and all enjoyed equall priviledges and interest in the State

Among the Sicionians there were admitted neither Physitians to hinder the operations of Nature, nor Strangers, to introduce innovations, nor Lawyers, to multiply Contentions

These men it seemes did not go out to see feathers fly in the Ayre, or Reeds shaken with the wind, they did not go to get Complements or Cringes, or Cariage of bodies, or new Modes of cloathing, or to tip the tongue with a little Language only, but they fearchd into the folidest and usefullest part of humane Wisdome, which is policy, And doubtleffe, that rare wife King made excellent use of their observations, and rewarded them accordingly And one of the happiest advantages to a Monarchy is, to have a discerning and bountifull King when occasion requires, for Subjects are accordingly active or idle, as they find their Prince able to judge of their merit and endeavours, and so employ them, for in the Common-wealth of Letters, and speculative Orbe of Vertue, the benigne afpect and influence of the Prince, is as Apollo was to the Muses, it gives a kind of comfortable heate, and illumination, whereby they are cherished aud made vicorous

The most material use therefore of Forraine Travel is to find out something that may bee applyable to the publique utility of one's own Countrey, as a Noble Personage of late yeares did, who observing the uniforme and regular way of stone structure up and down Italy, hath introduced that forme of building to London and Westminster, and else where, which though distassfull at first, as all innovations are, For they seeme like Bug-beares, or Gorgons heads, to the vulgar; yet they find now the commodity, sirmenesse and beauty thereof, the three maine principles of Architecture

Another feeing their Dikes, and draynings in the Netherlands, hath been a cause that much hath beene added to lengthen the skirts of this Island

Another in imitation of their aquedults and fluces, and conveyance of waters abroad, brought Ware-water through London fireets And it had been wished so great and renowned a City had not forgot Him so soon, considering what infinite advantages redounds to her thereby for in other Countreys I have seene Statues erected to persons in the most eminentest places (to eternize their memories by way of gratitude) for Inventions of farre lesser consequence to the encouragement of others, for it is an old Rule of State, and will be in date to the Worlds end, that Honor nourisheth Arts, and is the golden spurre of Vertue and industry

SECT. XVII

Mongst many other fruits of Forraine Travell, besides the delightfull ideas, and a thousand various thoughts and selfe contentments and inward solaces, it raiseth in the memory of things past, this is one

That when one hath seene the Tally and taillage of France, the Milstone of Spaine, the Afsife of Holland the Gabels of Italy, where one cannot bring an Egge, or roote to the market, but the Prince his part lyes therinna When he hath felt the excesse of heat, the dangerous Serains, the Poverty of foyle in many places, the Homelineffe and incommodity of lodging, the course cloathing of the best fort of Peasants, their wooden shooes, and straw hats, their Canvas breeches, and Buckram petticoates, their meager fare, feeding commonly upon Graffe, Hearbs, and Roots, and drinking Water, neere the condition of brute animals, who find the cloth always ready layed, and the buttry open When hee hath observed what a hard shift some make to hewe out a dwelling in the holes of the Rocks, others to dig one under the Sea, when he feeles, how in fome Climes the Heaven is as Braffe, in others as a dropping Sponge, in others as a great Bellowes, most part of the yeare, how the Earth, in many places is ever and anone fick of a fit of the Palsie, When hee sees the same Sun which only cher-1/heth and gently warmes his Countrey men, halfe parboyle and tanne other people, and those rayes which scorch the adusted soyles of Calabria and Spaine, only varnish and guild the green hony-fuckled plaines and hillocks of England, When he hath observed what hard shifts some make to rub out in this world in divers Countrevs. What speed Nature makes to finish her cours in them, How their best fort of women after forty, are presently fuperannuated, and looke like another Charing-Croffe, or Carackes that have paffed the Line in three vovages to the Indies When hee hath observed all this, At his returne home, hee will bleffe God, and love England better ever after, both for the Equality of the Temper in the Clime, where there is no where the like, take all the Seafons of the yeare together, (though fome would wish She might bee pushed a little nearer the Sun ) For the free condition of the fubject, and equall participation of the Wealth of the Land, for the unparallelled accommodation of lodging, and fecurity of Travell, for the admirable hospitality, for the variety and plenty of all forts of firme food, for attendance and cleanlineffe, for the rare fertility of Shoare and Sea, of Ayre, Earth, and Water, for the longevity, well favourednesse and innated honesty of the people And above all, for the moderation and decency in celebrating the true fervice of God, being faire from Superstition one way, and from Prophaneffe the other way, (though (with a quaking heart, I speake it) there have been strange infolencies committed of late) I fay, when hee hath well observed all this, he will sing, as once I did to a Noble friend of mine from Denmarque, in this Sat phique.

Dulcior fumus Patriæ, forensi Flammula, vino, præit unda, terræ Herba Britannæ [nativæ] mage transmarino Floie fuavis

SECT XVIII

Aving thus tafted of fo many waters, and beene Salted in the World abload, and being fafely reftored to the bosome of his owne Countrey, his next cours should bee, to settle himselfe awhile in one of the

Innes of Court, (which hee may do and yet bee a Courtier besides) to understand something of the Common Lawes of England, which are the inheritance of every fubrect, as also of the constitutions and Orders of the House of Parlament, the most indifferent, most wholefome, and Noblest way of Government in the World. both in respect of King and People. It being the greatest glory of a King, to be King of a free and well-crested. people, and the greatest glory of a People to bee under a Crown so embellished with Flowers, and sparckling with fuch ancient and facred gemmes of Royall Prerogatives Yet to bee under no Law but of their owne making, to bee the Setters of the great Dyall of the Common-Wealth themselves. To be subject to no Ordinance. to no Contribution or Taxe, but what is granted in that great Evidenicall Counfell, wherein every one from the Peere to the Pleberan hath an inclusive Vote And if every degree high and low, both in Towne and Countrey is there represented by their Substitutes, it were a hard measure (under correction, I humbly speake it) if the Levites, the best of all professions, who besides the holinesse of their function (as having charge of the Nobler halfe of man, of that which should guide and regulate the Understanding in making of all Lawes, I meane the Confinence) do make a confiderable part of the People of the Kingdome, should be thence excluded, for though it be inconfiftent with their calling to have hands to execute, yet they may well have heads to confult in that great Nationall Senat It were a hard case, I say, if those great Lights, which were used to shine with that brightnesse to the Envy (not the reproach or Scandall of any that I know of) of all other Reformed Churches, should be now put in wooden Candlesticks. That those Promotions, Endowments. and Honors, which our [pious and] well disposed Progenitors provided, to nourish the Arts, and serve as Spurres to Learning and Zeale, should now be cut off, as if they ferved only for Stirrops to Pride. There being no professions, but have certaine steps of rising up, and degrees of Promotion for their encouragement to make men æmuları meliora And he who hath spent the vigor of his yeares and Intellectuals in the Lords Vineyard, it may well become him (having ferved, as it were, his yeare of Fubile) to have his gray haires dignified with fome Honor and Authority, with reward and reft in his old age, and by his long experience and pames to fee that other pamefull Labourers be put into the Vine-vard, vet to have his hand often on the Plough If there bee a theefe in the Candle, (as wee use to say commonly) there is a way to pull it out, and not to put out the Candle, by clapping an Extinguisher presently upon it, If these Lights grow dim, there is a Irrenniall Snuffer for them . If these Trees beare not good fruit, or shoot forth any Luxuriant boughs, they are fure to feele the Pruning iron once every three veares

In the name of God, let these Lights be brought to move within the circumference of their own Orbes, and be kept from irregular and eccentrique motions, And I am confident it will render them lesse obnoxious to Envy and Scandal, and draw upon them a greater

opinion of Reverence

There is a Castle in the grand Caire in Ægypt, called the Nilescope, where there stands a Pillar with certaine markes to observe the height of the River of Nile, at her annuall mundation (which fals out precifely about the Summer Solftice) if the streame come to bee higher or lower than fuch markes, it portends dearth, but if at highest floud it rest about the middle, it is an infallible prefage of a plentifull yeare. So we may fay of these great Streames that are appointed to water the Lords Field, they must not fwell too high, nor must they run in too low a Channell And [Now] as humility is the fairest gemme that can shine in a Prelats Miter, so the greatest badge of a well devoted Soule, is to reverence the Dispensers of the facred Oracles of God, the Ghostiv Fathers, and Governors of the Church (which in analogy to the Trumphant in Heaven, hath also her degrees of Hierarchy) For besides Revenue there is a Vener ation, due to this holy function, and it were no hard matter to produce a Gran Fury of examples both Humane and Divine, that where this Reverence sayled, it hath been a symptome, and an infallible presage of a declining State, or [and] fome approaching judgement

But I hope I shall never live to see the day that the noble English Nation, who have been so renowned althe world over, and cryed up for their exemplary Piety. as well as Proweffe, will undervalue themselves so fane, and [or] grow [fo] distrustfull or conscious of their owne judgements, of their owne wonted Worth, and Ability fo far, as to thinke those Nations (who have not meanes to make the Church shine with that lustre) to be Waser than they, or to out go them in zeale, I fay, I hope the time will never com that the English will be so poor spirited.] as to receive laws for the Conscience, and forme of ferving God from those [people] who have been [fo] far behind them, both in the first Reception of Christianity and [in] the Reformation thereof-Proh pudor-I will not fay, by what I heard muttered abroad, it will be accounted a Nationall diminution, but if it should so fall out, it is no hard matter to be a Prophet, yea, by what hath passed already, to take a plaine prospect of those Anarchicall confusions, and fearefull calamities, which will inevitably enfue both in Church and State; unlesse with the pious care which is already taken to hinder the great Beast to breake into the Vineyard, there be also a speedy cours taken to sence Her from other Vermine, and leffer Animals (the belluam multorum capitum) which begin to brouze her leaves, to throw down her hedges, and fo lay her open to wast, fpoyle and fcorne [I speak it again with fear and trembling, that England is quite loft | Vnlesse there bee a cours taken, I fay, to suppresse those perty Sectaries, which fwarme fo in every corner, with that connivence (to the amazement of all the world, and disparagement of so well a policed Kingdome) who by their capricious and various kind of gingling fancies in ferving God

[fpirituall matters], do their best to bring in the opinion of the Pagan Philosopher (Themistrus) delivered once to Valens the Emperor, That as God Almighty had infused into his handmaid Nature, a diversity of operations, and that the beauty of the Universe consisted in a proportion of so many differing things, so he was delighted to fee himfelfe ferved by [in] various and fundry kinds of

worship and invocations

In all humblenesse, (and with submission of censure) I defire to be dispensed withall for this excursion out of my first intended subject, but I hope the digression will prove no transgression, in regard the quality of the matter is fuch, that every one hath a share and interest in it, and should be fensible, when that Liturgy and Church is vilified, wherein he hath received his Birth and Baptifm, and by whose compasse hee steeres his cours to Heaven When the Windows come down (and the chief Pillars threatned) the House must needs be in danger of falling, and he is worthy to be called a Niding, one, the pulse of whose soule beates but faintly towards Heaven, as having taken but weake impressions of the image of his Maker, who will not run and reach his hand to beare up his Temple

SEC. XIX

N the Inns of Court, where I left my returned Traveller, hee will be acquainted with Westminster-Hall, with the courses of pleading in the Courts of Iudicature, by which Knowledge, he may learne how to preferve his own, for, for want of fome experience herein, many have mightily fuffered in their estates, and made themfelves a prey to their follicitors and Agents Nor indeed is he capable to beare any Rule or Office in Town or Countrey, who is utterly unacquainted with Fohn an Okes, and Fohn a Stiles, and with their Termes.

Having beene thus fettled awhile at home, if businesse and the quality of his life will permit, hee may make one flying journey over againe, and in one Summer review all those Countreys, which hee had beene forty Months a feeing before And as the fecond thoughts are held the wifest, fo a fecond furvey is more exact, and of a more retentive vertue, and among ft ther benefits, it will infinitely improve one in his language Noah's Dove brought the branch of Olive in her Bill, at her Second journey, from the latter end of Mars, to the beginning of October, one may leafurely traverse France, crosse the Pyreneys, the Mediterranean, and the Alpes, and so returne either through Germany or through France againe, and thence come home through the Netherlands But being (bis Redux) returned the fecond time, let him thinke no more of Forrain Iourneys, unleffe it be by command, and upon publique service

Now to find entertainement for his houres of leafure at home, hee may amongft other studies, if his inclination leads him that way, apply himselfe to the most materiall and usefull parts of the Mathematiques, as the Art of Navigation and Fortistation. The study of the Mathematiques is abstructe, and therfore they require a ripe and well-seasoned judgement, they have this property, to make a dull capacity acute, and an acute capacity dull, if he fals unto them too foon which makes us to be centured abroad in the [for the preposterous] method of our studies in England, to make [by making] green units not yet halfe coddled as it were, to fall too early to such profound notions in our Universities, as putting [which their leggs.

For Conclusion, in this variety of studies and divertishments, I will give him this Caution, that he fall not into the hands of Alchymist, for though there be a world of rare conclusions, and delightfull experiments (most usefull and proper for Physitians) to be found in Chymistry which makes many to bee so inchanted therewith (that being got once in, they have not power to get out againe) Yet I never knew any yet, who made is as much as to put children to ftand too foon upon the benefit countervale the charge, but I have knowne many melt themselves [herby] to nothing (like [as] Icarus wings melted, [did] when he attempted the Art of flying) And while they labour so [So these devout Naturalists and Disciples of Demogorgon while] with the fiveat of their brows to blow [they ly blowing] the cole, and [to] bring gold over the helm, they commonly make a shipwrack of [all] their own fortunes

Et bona dilapidant omnia pro lapide

And the reason well may be, that 'tis doubted, whether such undertakings, bee pleasing to God Almighty or no, for though Art be Nature's Ape, and is found to perfect her in some things. Yet, it may well bee termed a kind of Presumption in man (by setching downe the Planets and damning them as criminals to certaine Mettals) to attempt the transmutation of one species into another, as it were against the first ordinance of the Creator, and the primitive intent of Nature, whose hand-maid shee is, in the Production of all Elementary bodies. Therefore to be led into a kind of sooles Paradis, and a concept of the Philosophers-Stone, and to spend much money in Chymistry, hee shall never have the advise of

IAMES HOWELL.

FINIS.

APPENDIX

SOM DIRECTIONS

for travelling into Turky and the Levant parts

F my Travellers curiofity hath a further extent, and that Europe cannot bound the largnes of his defires, but that he hath a disposition to see the Turks dominions, which next to Christendome are fittest to be known, in regard He is the sole Earthly potentat, and fatalist soe of the Crosse of Christ, and so som advantages may bee taken by prying into the errors of his government and weaknesse of his dominions, I say if he hath a mind to make som researches what kind of Soule doth inform, actuat, govern, and conserve that vast Empire, which is an extension of about three thousand two hundred miles in one continued peece, a narrow neck of Sea onely excepted, If his fancy bends that way He may either take his advantage of the season, that our company of Turky Marchants set out their Shipps for Company of Turky Marchants set out their Shipps for Company of Turky Marchants set out their Shipps for Company of Turky Marchants set out their Shipps set of the season and the season and the season and the season are set of the season and the season are set of the season and the season are set of the season and the season are season as the seaso

flantinople, which commonly is in the Spring, wherein hee may go with little danger (and lesse expence) for they are lusty vessels every way well appointed, and passing in one of them, he may have the opportunity to land at divers port Townes in Spaine, Italy, or Greece, and yet reach Constantinople in lesse then three Months Or he may go through France, and so crosse the Alps, or Embarke at Marfeilles for Ligorn, where he shall meet with frequent commodity of shipping from Smyrna

Or else he may go to Venice, where he may agree with a Janizary to conduct him in company of a Caravan all the way through the Continent of Greece as farre as Constantinople, where in the way he may ruthfully observe how that Country, which was used to be the nource of all foeculative knowledge, as also of policy and prowesse, is now ore whelm'd with barbarifme and ignorance, with flavery and abjection of Spirit He will admire how the whole people are degenerated both in their hearts and heads, from the ancient courage and knowledg they were so cryed up for in former ages, In this journey he will meet with fundry forts of nations that go with the Caravan. specially with Jewes, as well as with Greeks and other Christians, therefore as he is to bee referv'd in concealing his own Religion, so he must be a modurpowos he must become all to all in point of morall conversation

Being come to Conflantinople he shall behold that City which by the advantage of her situation is sittest of all other to be mistresse of the Earth, for she stands almost in the midst of the old would, therfore hath she the advantage of receiving accounts, and issuing out commands from and to all other Countreys with more celerity. She hath on the one side immediat commerce with Thrace, as on the other with Asia, The Pontus or black Sea washeth her one of her skirts, and the Marmora, or Hellespont, the other, the mouths of which seas are so narrow, that no passage can be fore'd against her Castles Now as the first glance makes the smartest impression of the object, so a fresh Commer to any strange place apprehends things with a cleerer judgement, with a greater pleasure and a greedier desire then when the object is grown stale and samiliar unto him, therefore in this respect, he who arrives suddenly from ship to shore at any great Town, in a strange Countrey, hath a greater advantage, then he who passet by de grees from the skirts thereof to the centre

In the Port, for Constantinople is called so nar' ¿ Eoyiù he may observe more then any where else, the Religion. the Fustice, the militia, and moralities of the Musulmen Touching their Religion, he must observe how it differ's, and in what point it conformes with other Religions. how Christians are more beholden to the Turk then to the Yew, for he acknowledgeth Christ to have been a great Prophet, to have bin born of the Virgin Mary, who they fay was fo before, and after her delivery: they hold that he was conceived by divine infpiration without a Father, as Adam was created without a Mother, They believe further that he was not crucified but taken up to Heaven, and that he shall come again at the end of the world on Earth againe, and that the Feres did not put him to death, but another man who refembled him. Hee may observe the substance or their Religion, which is, that they believe one fole GOD, CREATOR of the whole World, the punisher of the bad, and Rewarder of the good, who hath created Hell for the one, and Paradis for the other; the felicity whereof confifts in the height of fenfuall delights. They believe the Decalog of Motes, Friday is their Sabboth, they pray five times a day, They have no bells but a Cryer out of a high Tower, They are great Founders of Hospitalls, of Hanes to entertain Travellers, of bridges, Repairers of high wayes, and great builders of Temples which are very flately though their own Houses be homely, which Temples they reverence in the humblest postures that the body can out it felfe in, they first sit crosse-legg'd waving their limms, and proftrat themselves often on their faces to kiffe the Earth, afterwards they stand up with their hands bow'd at their Eares, and in these kinds of Church-gesticulations, they differ from all other people They are obliged to give the first day of the yeare the Tith of all their gaines to the poore for a new yeares-They pray for the dead and invoke Saints. They so adore the Alcoran that they never put it under their girdles, 'tis death to translate it out of Arabic into any vulgar language, or for any lay man to dispute of it, or raise any scruples, which they say is the cause of such a rare uniformity and universall obedience among fuch fwarmes of feverall Nations that professe Mahometisme, They are chary of the conscience, in so much that they put no man to his Oath, 'tis enough that he fweare by the faith of a Mufulman

Now 'tis thought that this Religion is like to be of long continuance, because there is no nation where the Church man is more powerfull and of greater esteem, in regard that all theire Judges are Ecclesiastiques, and

fo have power o're the body [and] foule

As touching their Iuftice though it be more arbitrary. 'tis far more speedy than among Christians and more fevere. The cause of the speediness is, that there are no deeds, dead precedents, or any moth eaten record to puzzle and retard the businesse, but upon producement of witnes the Sute is fuddenly determined Secundum allegata et probata, every man being his own advocat, 'Tis true appeales in fom cases may be made to the Mustir who is their chiefest Bishop, whom they have in extreme reverence, that neither the Gran Vifiar, or the Emperour Himselfe will question his sentence, but acquiesse thereon. As their justice is more speedy, fo it is more fevere, for they have fundry forts of punishments that torture the fense a longer time, as drubbing, guunshing, flaying alive, impaling, and thrusting of lances through the fondament, ôv

Touching their Militia, they go with greater animofity against the European, than against the Persian, to prevent their destruction which divers of their prophesies tel them shal com from the Christian

Touching the morall behaviour of the Turks, they may be a pattern to fome Christian nations in point of common humanity, At their meetings they bow their bodies with very gentle and hearty salutes, among the rest 'tis admirable how humble and courteous their very Mariners are to Passengers, nothing so booms as I know som Nations to be, the left side among Soldiers is the better hand, because he hath the freer command of his sword, they never uncover their heads or take off their turbants, so that in the rough of their sury the greatest Execution they use to rap out, is, God fend thee as much trouble as a Christians hatt, which is almost in perpetuall motion

In Constantinople, one may discern the power of the Turk, but if my Traveller defires to pry into his Policy, let him venture to the gran Cayro, and from Constantinople he shall meet with frequent conveniences to passe by Sea to Alexandria, and fo up the Nile thither, and if he cut out his time fo that he may be there 'twixt the Summer Solftice and October, he may behold that Mysterious River in her highest pride Being arrived at the gran Cavro he shall see the greatest heap of flaves upon Earth in one body, a City of 35 miles compas, having 35000 Churches, and 24000 streets, in and about that City there are the agedst fort of antiquities upon Earth, for they will speake you of Kings they had eighteen thousand years agoe, which was before the worlds creation according to our compute above twelve thousand yeares If he will observe the genius of the Egyptian, he will find him to be a Nation of a bafer allay then the Turk, a Nation born to obey not to fway, for among the various habitants of the Earth, there is populus fervus et populus dominus,

There is an hiatus in the thought here the text runs on as follows-

fuch as to fee the holy Sepulcher he may paffe home by Jerusalem, and all this he may do in as short a compas of time as the Sun finisheth his periodic annual motion

Before my Traveller puts himfelfe to fuch peregrinations, 'tis requisit he should know the use of the Globe before hand, for it is the only way to make one a good chorographer, and Geographer, whereof the one respects accidents, the other quantities Being a good Globist, hee will quickly find the Zenith, the distances, the climes and the Parallells, and distances of Regions as he paffeth along, which is eafily don, for if he fubtract the height of the pole from the quadrant of go degrees, the rest will shew the Zenth of any place. The distance between places may be known by the elevation of the pole, as (to produce a familiar home Example) Oxford is commonly held to be 51 degrees 30 minutes, Yorke is 54 degrees 30 minutes, fubtract the leffer from the greater, then remaines 3 degrees which allowing 60 miles to every degree is the distance 'twixt those two Cities. To know the dime, and parallell double the howers above twelve in the longest folftitiall day, and the product will shew the climat, quadruble them 'twill shew the parallell lastly, to know the greatnes, and furthest extent of a Region. let him observe the two latitudes, in the North, where 'tis greatest, in the Southern point where 'tis least, compare the degrees of both, and 'twill shew him the diameter of any Countrey, as for example, in great Britain take the flarr point in Devenshire which is under 50 degrees in latitude, and the River Ardurnus in Scotland which hath 60 degrees (to omit minutes) fubduct the 10 odd degrees of difference which being multiplied by fixty a peece will make 600 miles. and that is the utmost extent of this Island

My Traveller having now breath'd the fiery aires of Afric, with the fweete breefes of Afria, and Europe, having beheld fuch a multitude of ftrange objects and all this, not by hear-fay only, or through the mift of other mens breaths, but through the cleere casements of his own optiques, I say having seen all this, and being safely returned to his Mother soile, he may very well acquiesse in her lap, and terminat his desires from further travell abroad, but be contented to live and dye an Islander without treading any more Continents

---His terminus Esto

